Agricultural officials differ in their views of wheat deal halt

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Spokesmen for Kansas agriculture had differing views over the weekend to news that President Ford had squelched the sale of 125 million bushels of grain to the Soviet Union.

The president of the Kansas Farm Bureau, John Junior Armstrong, said Ford was listening to the wrong advisers and the move would do "immeasureable harm to our nation's balance of payments and to American agriculture."

Dr. Roy Fredrick, Kansas State University extension economist, said the move may spell lower wheat prices but he thought the grain would remain above the $4 level that has prevailed since this summer's harvest.

The secretary of the National Association of Wheat Growers, Don Crane of Wright, Kan., told farmers, "Don't panic. We've got the wheat and the world needs it."

Congressional candidate Don Smith told an audience of farmers in Syracuse, Kan., "Now that they've dropped the other shoe, you know how well your interests are being taken care of by people in Washington."

Fredrick said since the contracts were announced on Friday, then withdrawn Saturday, "I can't see this having a big effect on prices because we're back to where we were to begin with on exports." He said he did think the suspension would take some of the steam out of the surge that carried wheat prices to a season high of $4.82 in Topeka last week.

Armstrong, a northeast Kansas grain and livestock farmer, didn't agree. He said the action threatens to ruin American farmers.

A Farm Bureau spokesman said several of the bureau's board members had called him and said they could not find any local elevator that was buying grain Saturday. He said it was because the grain trade was stunned and it saw its foreign markets being destroyed by the President's action.

"At at time when the administration should be pulling out all stops to encourage food production on the nation's farms and ranches, this action to block legitimately negotiated sales is going to turn farmers and ranchers off," Armstrong said.

Armstrong said the idea that processors in this country may run short of grain because of foreign sales is "a lot of baloney."

Crane said there is suspicion that big grain companies are using Ford's action as a ploy to drive down the price of wheat by making farmers fear the world market will dry up.

"We are afraid the farmer will panic, reacting out of fear that his price will drop back to $1.25 a bushel and try to save wheat he can by selling now," Crane said. "That would play into the hands of the wholesalers."

Crane said White House statements that the Russian sale would cause higher food prices is not valid, "since anyone knows the grain price has little to do with food prices."

Smith, a Dodge City attorney seeking the first district congressional seat now held by Republican Keith Sebelius, said the Republican administration has "done in" the farmer just as was the case with the Russian grain sale in 1972.

"It is just another example of the complete insensitivity to the needs of farmers in western Kansas. It is a serious matter," Smith said.

He called for the immediate resignation of Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz.

Hearing on wheat deal set

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson said today he wants to know why the White House was not advised in advance of the sale of $500 million worth of U.S. wheat to the Soviet Union.

Government officials were to meet this afternoon with representatives of the grain exporters in an effort to formulate a voluntary plan for reporting foreign sales of U.S. grain.

The White House announced over the weekend that the sale of U.S. grain to the Soviet Union had been canceled and that President Ford had not known that such a deal was in the works until the contracts were signed.

Jackson said the Senate subcommittee on investigations, which he heads, will focus during a hearing scheduled for Tuesday on why the White House was not advised in advance of the sale.

"It was as if the Agriculture Department wished to hand the President a fait accompli," Jackson said.

Meanwhile, farm commodity futures were down the limit on the opening of the Chicago Board of Trade today, the first session after the government announced cancellation of the grain sale.

It appeared that traders were concerned that the government might expand its efforts over other farm commodities sold in export at a time when stocks and productions are thinning out.

President Ford, anxious to find out how farmers are taking the cancellation, made a call to the Kansas wheatlands Sunday night.

Fall has fallen

What seemed like tons of leaves have already fallen from trees in the Highway Gardens on the State Fairgrounds. After Otis McNew, 1820 East Ninth, used a vacuum machine to gather the leaves, he dumps them into a truck for hauling to the campgrounds where they are being used for a compost pile.

Ford said in favor of income surcharge

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is reported ready to recommend an income tax surcharge on corporations and upper income individuals as part of his anti-inflation program.

Such a move, however, already has been criticized in some congressional quarters. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy D-Mass., urged Ford today to discard any plans for a surcharge.

"The basic defect of the surcharge is that it compounds the gross inequity that already exists in our income tax laws," said Kennedy in a statement.

Kennedy said a surcharge is "fundamentally unfair to millions of ordinary taxpayers because it hits hardest at those who already pay more than their fair share of taxes."

The President spent much of Sunday working on the package of proposals he will outline to Congress and the nation in a nationally televised and broadcast address from Capitol Hill at 4 p.m. EDT Tuesday.

White House spokesmen said Ford has settled on more than a dozen specific proposals, centering on problems with food and energy prices, the depressed housing industry and record high interest rates.

Administration sources said they expect the income tax surcharge to be among the President's recommendations. According to Time magazine, Ford is ready to seek a 5 per cent surtax on corporations as well as individuals in the higher income tax brackets.

Time said the surcharge "probably" would be on individual incomes of $7,500 and above and on family incomes of $15,000 and above.

The President, asked about the magazine report as he left Bethesda Naval Hospital after visiting his wife Sunday night, said "I make no comments on what we're going to talk about on Tuesday."

Administration sources acknowledged the 5 per cent surtax had been discussed at high level economic meetings.

It probably would be coupled with tax reductions for those in lower income brackets who are hit hard by inflation, the sources said.

The surtax presumably would apply against taxes paid — not the full income of an individual or a corporation — but details were scanty as Ford put the final touches on his major economic address.

The President's proposals on housing are expected to include a recommendation for tax exemptions to encourage the flow of savings into financial institutions for use as mortgage loans. The housing industry is in its deepest slump ever because of tight money and high interest rates.

After the Sunday meeting, White House press secretary Ron Nessen turned aside questions on the President's tax plans.

No major fuel woes expected

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Although a shortage of natural gas is expected for some commercial and industrial users in Missouri this winter, the head of the state fuel allocation board says he sees no major fuel problems during the cold months ahead.

"I'm very optimistic," says FAB Chairman James F. Mauze. "I don't think this winter will be as bad as last winter."

Mauze says applications for emergency fuel supplies have dropped off in recent months since the end of the oil embargo, but he attributes that to the fact that fuel companies have been making more fuel available to their outlets.

A shortage is seen, however, in supplies of natural gas this winter, Mauze says, and there will probably be higher prices for liquid propane gas. There will be sufficient natural gas supplies for residential users, he emphasized.

While President Ford is expected to call for increased energy conserving efforts Tuesday, Mauze says it's hard to determine if Missourians have given up the intense effort to conserve since the energy crisis eased months ago.

"It's hard to tell how the voluntary efforts are going now because there is a supply of fuel available," Mauze says, but he points out that if conservation efforts had been completely abandoned, the fuel board would know through the resulting increase in requests for emergency fuel allocations.

Possible report on police probe tonight

Excerpts from the long-awaited report of the investigation of the local police department may be released at tonight's City Council session.

"There will definitely be some news released tonight that hasn't been released before," said Fourth Ward Councilman Robert Eidson. Eidson, a Republican, has in the past expressed a desire to expedite the release of the report.

Asked whether the full report would be made public as this time, Eidson said "not necessarily ... We want to check with the entire council on that ... But, unless something very, very significant comes up, we will at least make available some new information, if not the complete report."

First Ward Councilman Allen Hawkins, GOP chairman of the police committee, Monday said he favors releasing the report "if no other council members object." Hawkins also urged at the council's Sept. 16 meeting that the report be made public as soon as possible.

Mayor Jerry Jones, asked whether he would approve the public release tonight of the investigation report, said he would "cross that bridge when I come to it."

The council is also expected to act on the hiring of Dan Rotegard, 23, Minneapolis, as the city's new economic development director.

Council approval of Rotegard's appointment as economic development director is viewed as a near-certainty because of the political realignment of the council and the expected absence tonight of Third Ward Democratic Councilman Carl Franklin who, in January voted against the appointment of Charles Elliot, formerly of Trenton, as city economic development director. Franklin, an employe of the Missouri-Pacific Railroad, is out of town on business, a company official said Monday.

In other business, the council is expected

Brezhnev prods action on ending the arms race

BERLIN (AP) — Soviet party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev has declared that it is time to "move further ahead" in disarmament talks, a restatement of standing Kremlin policy.

The prod came in a speech Sunday as Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger prepared to travel to Moscow on Oct. 23 for talks on nuclear weaponry and as Americans and Russians are meeting again in Geneva for strategic arms limitation talks (SALT).

Brezhnev used a live 70-minute appearance on East German television to reiterate Soviet proposals on limitation of strategic armaments, reduction of troops in Central Europe, destruction of chemical weapons, withdrawal of nuclear vessels from the Mediterranean area and cessation of underground nuclear tests.

U.S. officials in Washington said an initial reading of the speech indicated no new proposals.

The Soviet leader, in East Berlin to participate in the observance of the 25th anniversary of the East German state, said previous agreements on arms control "are not functioning badly."

The SALT Talks resumed last month after a six-month recess.

At his Aug. 28 news conference, President Ford endorsed the goal of seeking a new American-Soviet accord to limit strategic arms. He said negotiating differences within the U.S. government would be resolved shortly.

The differences concern whether the United States should strive for a comprehensive agreement, replacing the current temporary ceilings on offensive missiles with a permanent limitation, or confine the talks to control of multiple warheads, on which the Americans have a commanding lead.

U. Alexis Johnson, the chief U.S. negotiator at the talks, indicated Sept. 17 in an interview at Geneva that the United States now favored the former approach.

SALT I, the first round, established a rough parity of nuclear weapons. SALT II, which began in November 1972, was to have dealt with controls on the quality of nuclear weapons, but a virtual deadlock developed.

The negotiations adjourned March 19 in hopes that the July summit between Brezhnev and former President Richard M. Nixon would produce agreement on how to proceed. The summit produced only marginal agreements.

Kissinger is expected to seek ways to unlock the talks during his visit this month.

To broaden pact

Nuclear testing negotiations begin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said today that negotiations are starting up in Moscow to try to broaden an underground weapons test agreement to include peaceful nuclear tests.

The talks grow out of former President Richard M. Nixon's summit meeting last summer with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and involve a "good-faith effort to develop criteria" for banning weapons tests above 150 kilotons, Kissinger told a news conference.

Kissinger's remarks came one day after Brezhnev declared during a speech in East Berlin that it is time to "move further ahead" in disarmament talks.

On another issue, he said the Soviets have never assured him that 60,000 Jews would be allowed to emigrate annually as part of a compromise to gain congressional approval of trade and credit benefits.

However, he said he shares the "same goal" of senators leading the drive to ease Soviet restraints on emigration.

Turning to the Ford administration's decision to hold up a $500 million shipment of corn and wheat to the Soviet Union, the secretary said "a strong possibility exists we may have misled" the Soviets on how quickly shipments would be processed.

Kissinger said fulfillment of the Soviet order now would have a "disproportionate impact" on the American economy, the fight against inflation and U.S. ability to meet other world commitments. He added that Treasury Secretary William E. Simon would discuss the subject in Moscow later this week.

"It was a misunderstanding between bureaucracies," Kissinger said.

On the Middle East, Kissinger said "there will be no concrete agreements or dramatic announcements" during his visit to the area beginning Wednesday.

He announced, meanwhile, that three countries—Saudi Arabia, Algeria and Morocco— have been added to his itinerary, but said he still intends to return to Washington on Oct. 15.

Despite the addition of three oil-producing countries, Kissinger said he and the administration want to keep the Arab-Israeli negotiations separate from U.S. efforts to deal with the four-fold increase in petroleum prices.

Energy-saving efforts decline

JEFFREY D. ALDERMAN
Associated Press Writer

American fuel conservation efforts have lost some of their steam, and experts in and out of government are calling for new ways to save energy and slow the inflationary flow of dollars to oil countries.

An Associated Press survey completed on the eve of President Ford's economic policy speech shows that Americans are still traveling less, driving their cars more slowly and turning out lights.

The survey showed these efforts have slackened since the end of the embargo. They continue to provide considerable energy savings — more than a million barrels of oil a day. That's good, but not enough, many experts are saying.

With American crude production slowly declining and imports of expensive foreign crude slowly climbing, more conservation is needed to halt the dollar flow. The dollar drain is one of the biggest reasons for the inflation that plagues this country and much of the industrialized world, economists say.

France has already moved to cut oil imports by 10 per cent, and Italy is also taking mandatory steps to reduce energy use.

Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon said last week that conservation is the only tool this country has right now to bring down foreign oil prices.

President Ford is expected to announce some new measures for conserving energy Tuesday, but advance word is that no radical steps will be taken.

Simon's successor as head of the Federal Energy Administration, John Sawhill, is known to favor a federal tax on gasoline to cut demand. President Ford has said he does not favor such a tax.

The AP conservation survey, like several others taken during the past year, showed that people cited inflation and the high price of gasoline and electricity as the prime reasons for cutting back. Industry spokesman also said they were cutting back because it saved them money.

"Since the oil embargo, only the price is making people conserve," said Dr. James Murray of the National Opinion Research Center in Chicago which has been polling citizen views on energy for the FEA. "It's strictly economic."

Many experts feel that voluntary conservation can accomplish only so much. They say any further reductions in consumption require stronger measures.

Former Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird, one of Ford's leading unofficial advisers, says he favors a rationing system to curb gasoline consumption. Ford spokesman say the president is opposed to such a move.

Garbage pail perfumes room

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns the thoughtlessness on the part of good-intentioned visitors to a new mother. My daughter recently had a baby and she had so many callers that needed rest was impossible for her.

Many stayed on and on never realizing she should have been getting some rest. Each caller relived her own pregnancies, births and the whole bit. Some even mentioned how tired they had been at such times but never caught on that the same held true in this case. It is not that their kindness was not appreciated but too much candy can make any of us sick after a while. — GRANDMOTHER.

DEAR POLLY — My Pointer is for Susan who wants to remove the static electricity from her shag rug. She might spray it with that product we use in our dryers to remove static electricity from clothes. Spray it where the main traffic is and she'll find it works like magic and lasts through several uses of the vacuum cleaner. It also works on many coats and pants that pick up lint, dog hairs, etc. — ERMA.

DEAR GIRLS — Do try an inconspicuous spot first. Some antistatic agents cause dirt to cling to a carpet so treated. The American Carpet Institute and many rug companies suggest the introduction of more moisture in the air as a cure. Pans of water can be put on radiators or heaters or even decorative vases that are not easily knocked over can be kept filled with fresh water. — POLLY.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — I have pets so must use a covered garbage pail in the kitchen but it becomes very hot and humid on the inside and the garbage reeks in just a few hours. I would like some ideas that would rid my garbage pail of these strong odors. — JUNE.

The dieter's delight

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

One day not long ago, the story goes, a young lady ordered a Bloody Mary in a Chicago cocktail lounge. When she noticed the swizzle stick was missing, she took a celery stalk from a nearby relish dish and stirred her drink. It did something for the flavor, and the management began serving celery sticks with all the Bloody Marys.

True or false, it marks one more use for this versatile vegetable that has long been a standby for dieters, a base for salads and a prime ingredient for stews and soups.

Actually celery, which once grew wild all over Europe and Asia, was originally used as a medicinal herb. Then, about three centures ago, an enterprising Italian cook began to serve celery stalks, or ribs, raw and boiled the root as a vegetable.

The English author, A. A. Milne, a celery buff, once commented that it was the only food which should be eaten alone. "For," he said, "it is the only food that one really wants to hear oneself eat."

Doctors have long told overweight patients to control those hunger pangs and span the gap between meals with a rib or so of celery. In fact, comedian Buddy Hackett once quipped that celery was the only food on the minus side of the calorie chart. One rib gives you only five calories, he noted, and you burn up more than that chewing it.

Whatever its attractions, celery has become big business in America today. In Florida alone, they grow a $24-million crop of celery every year, covering farmland equal to the size of Bermuda.

Tasty as it is raw, celery makes an excellent dinner vegetable fried, braised or baked with a sauce. Here's a recipe I ran into for braised celery wedges with mushrooms.

2 stalks of celery
1 4-ounce can of sliced mushrooms, drained
2 tablespoons dehydrated onion flakes
1 chicken bouillon cube
1¼ cups boiling water
⅛ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon hot sauce

Cut celery stalks crosswise about 6 inches from the base. You can save the leaves and use as a garnish. Cut each stalk lengthwise into 4 wedges; arrange wedges in large skillet. Scatter mushrooms and onion flakes over the wedges. Dissolve bouillon cube in the water; add to skillet along with salt and hot sauce. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer 15 minutes, covered, or till celery is tender but still crisp. Makes 8 servings. Good with a chilled dry white wine.

Music makers may be the youngest in the world

Orchestra assembled

Taking their places and ready to be directed by their nurse, 3-year-old children clap their hands, ring their bells and rattle their rumba rattles as part of their training emphasizing aesthetic education in Prague, Czechoslovakia. (AP)

By IVA DRAPALOVA

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Australians may have the youngest swimmers, East Germans the youngest figure-skaters, but apparently the Czechs have the youngest orchestra in the world.

To be more precise, youngest orchestras, because the Prague creche visited is far from being the only one which teaches toddlers the joy of active music-making.

Music education, long reserved for children 3 years and over, has now invaded infant institutions throughout Czechoslovakia and 3-month-old babies are now getting their first taste of it.

In the Luhacovice baby home in South Moravia, Marie Damborska worked out a method of introducing musical and rhythmic stimuli into the lives of 3-month-olds. She recommends at the daily music sessions the nurse play first a tape recording of classical music to induce the right atmosphere. Then the nurse takes over and, singing a folk song, picks up and hugs a baby and dances with him emphasizing the rhythm of the tune.

In a Prague creche, which cares for the infants of employed mothers from 7-months to 3-years-old, a nurse was seen softly crooning to an 8-month-old baby passing through the "adaptation" period during which the human voice has a particularly soothing effect on the baby first separated from its mother. Meanwhile older children in the 2 and 3-years section grabbed with enthusiasm the proffered simple musical instruments and unself-consciously played, danced and sang.

"The guitar, the guitar, we have the guitar today," sang a happy little girl when the head of the creche, dark-haired blue-eyed Vera Jelinkova, herself a mother of three strapping boys, walked in with the instrument. Nurses in neat blue frocks and white aprons handed out the instruments — ebony sticks, triangles, bells, rumba rattles — while the "orchestra" quickly took their seats and joined with nurses in rhythmic singing and playing. Those who had no instrument clapped their hands to emphasize the rhythm.

"Children perceive and enjoy the rhythm before they take in the melody. Sometimes they learn to play and sing before they learn to speak properly," Mrs. Jelinkova siad.

In the cloak room hung a much-thumbed notebook containing the words of songs children learn in the creche. "The mothers asked us to provide it," a nurse said. "The children want to sing at home too and want their mothers to join in," she explained.

Nurses sing and dance with and for the younger babies regularly. By the time the babies are year-old toddlers they are trying to join in, and from time to time are lent a musical instrument. "We don't expect them to play it, but they enjoy handling it," Mrs. Jelinkov said. "By the time they are two years old they are used to and thoroughly enjoy the rhythmic songs," she added.

The nurses, one for each four children in the state-run creche, use melodic instruments and the children join in at will. The songs chosen are often local folk songs or nursery rhymes. One begins, "The millers are happy boys when their mill clip clop goes," and the "clip clops," liberally sprinkled through the ditty, provide the opportunity to beat the sticks and clap hands to emphasize the rhythm.

The range of instruments is extended as children progress to the 3-year-old group. All children join in the singing and dancing but there are no solos.

"We don't want to encourage prima donnas," Mrs. Jelinkova said.

Suicidal persons: face up to reality

Dear Ann Landers: Several times I've been inclined to rebut someone who had expressed an opinion in your column. I was never moved to write until now.

The writer addressed her remarks to "those who have attempted suicide, or are now considering it." She begged them to think of their loved ones and the guilt they would carry to their graves because of something they had done or NOT done. Rubbish! Applesauce! Horsefeathers!

The person who is contemplating suicide is full of hate. He really hates himself, but manages to transfer that hate to others. His only goal is to make that person (or persons) suffer. Almost every suicide stems from the thought, "They will be sorry for the way they treated me!"

My advice to would-be suicides is this: Stop kidding yourself. They will NOT be sorry. If you commit suicide you'll prove they were right when they said you were too weak to face life.

Their battle cry is, "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen." So, you got out of the kitchen and left it all to them. You also left a sunny day in June, the beautiful girl you might have kissed, the book you might have read, the dress your daughter will wear at her wedding, and your first grandchild's heart-warming smile. Think. Think. Think. — Seen It Happen

Dear Seen: Thanks for an excellent appraisal. The psychiatrists are on your side. Yet — the next letter is very interesting.

Dear Ann Landers: I want to thank the woman who advised suicidal people to give some thought to those they love. Her letter killed an idea that has been in my mind for quite a while.

The overwhelming desire to escape the pain of living can be most appealing to one who suffers a lot. I know, because I've considered suicide many times. But I was always stopped by a nagging feeling that I shouldn't —no real reason, just something told me, "Don't do it." That woman's letter gave me the reason.

I'm a college student (girl, age 19). For the past ten months I've been in a deep depression. I'm climbing out of it now and feel confident I'll make it. There'll be times perhaps when I'll slip, but now I know why I must never let go.

Thank you, Ann, for printing that letter. It was a lifesaver. — Rescued

Dear Friend: You don't say you've been getting professional help. If you haven't, please consider it. Periodic bouts with deep depression are tough to handle alone. Good luck, honey.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife (let's call her Mary) belongs to a number of charitable organizations. She keeps getting correspondence addressed to "Mrs. Mary Smith."

After a year, I remarked quite casually that we aren't divorced, I'm not dead yet and I'd prefer that she list herself as Mrs. John Smith. She hit the roof.

I can see a woman using her first name or maiden name for professional purposes, but my wife is not employed and I believe she is clearly out of line. Do you agree? — John Smith

Dear John: The fact that you ask her should be enough. As a matter of social etiquette, she is Mrs. John Smith. I'm with you.

Shooting-suicide reported in Iowa

CLIO, Iowa (AP)—Russell Richardson, 54, Indianola, died Sunday as the result of a shooting-suicide, according to Wayne County Sheriff Jess Hook.

Listed in fair condition Sunday at the Decatur County hospital at Leon is Kenny Robinson, 23, Clio.

Hook said the shooting followed an apparent argument between the two men at Robinson's home Sunday morning.

Richardson shot Robinson twice with a .22-caliber pistol and then took his own life, the sheriff said.

Flip Wilson gives best effort to TV audience

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Yes, if I wanted to take all the opportunities that are open to me, I could make another $10 million a year. But why?

"What do you do with money after you have enough? I would only be prostituting my talent, and I wouldn't be giving my best effort to the audience I care most about—the television audience."

A remarkably serious Flip Wilson was talking about his life and career in a Sunset Strip office which is headquarters for his record company.

He also has another office for his television production company, but he says he does most of his work in his den at home.

Despite his superstar status, Wilson has eschewed the usual trappings of such a position, preferring to do things his way.

He maintains a low profile off the television screen, keeping interviews to a bare minimum, avoiding industry events except for an occasional benefit, declining the fortune he could earn in Las Vegas and concerts.

"Television is my cookie," he remarked. "I think it is the greatest thing there is. Sure, I could go out on a weekend and play a concert before 15,000 people. But I might come back tired and if I was doing a television show, I wouldn't be giving my best shot to 30 million people.

"I'm not interested in films at the moment, either. You work a year and a half, two years on a movie, and if you're lucky, it will be seen by 12 million people.

"In television I can reach 30 million in a week. I would rather have my talent enjoyed by as many people as I can reach."

His talent is being seen less often this television season. Wilson will appear in four NBC specials, the first appearing Oct. 18 with guests stars Peter Sellers, Lily Tomlin, Richard Pryor and Martha Reeves. But not Geraldine.

"I didn't want to have Geraldine on the first show," Wilson explained of his hilarious female impersonation.

"I would like the audience to know that I can continue to grow as an entertainer. I want to try new ideas and make the special really special.

"Actually, I did Geraldine only in about one out of every four of the weekly shows. She is a very powerful character, and I don't want Geraldine to become stronger than Flip Wilson."

Wilson's weekly show made its debut in September 1970, and soared to the top of the audience ratings. It remained one of the hottest shows until zapped by the bucolic "The Waltons."

Wilson said his departure from the weekly format was entirely voluntary.

Doctor has not heard from Nixon since Friday night

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon has not spoken with his physician since Friday night, and the doctor says that apparently is a sign the former President is recovering normally from phlebitis.

"I assume that means things are going along satisfactorily," Dr. John C. Lungren said Sunday.

Nixon, 61, was released on Friday from Memorial Hospital Medical Center at Long Beach after a 12-day stay for treatment of phlebitis, an inflammation of a vein, in his left leg.

Nixon is receiving oral doses of an anticoagulant drug, Coumadin.

Aides at the former Western White House made no comment Sunday on Nixon's condition, but a spokesman said Saturday the former president was resting and following his doctor's orders to limit his activity.

Lungren, who described Nixon as more exhausted when he left the hospital than when he entered, said his patient told him on the phone Friday night that he was glad to be home.

Lungren has said Nixon, who resigned as President in August, should avoid traveling long distances for at least one month and perhaps three.

Sentence reduction requested by Colson

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charles W. Colson, once a defendant in the Watergate cover-up trial, today asked that his one to three-year jail sentence in the Ellsberg case be reduced, in part because of the pardon granted to former President Richard M. Nixon.

Colson, 42, pleaded guilty on June 3 to one count of obstructing justice. He admitted then attempting to influence the outcome of the trial of Pentagon Papers figure Daniel Ellsberg by attempting to leak defamatory information about Ellsberg to the press.

In exchange for his guilty plea, U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica agreed that charges against Colson in the cover-up case would be dropped. In connection with the cover-up, Colson faced one count of conspiracy and another of obstructing justice.

Conspiracy charges against Colson stemming from the break-in against Ellsberg's psychiatrist also were dropped in exchange for the guilty plea.

In a new request today, lawyers for Colson said that because of the timing of his sentencing date, June 21, U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell was unable to take Nixon's pardon into account in deciding how the former White House assistant should be punished.

During the Ellsberg break-in trial, Colson testified that Nixon had personally approved efforts to defame Ellsberg's character.

"The responsibility now devolves upon the court to consider what action is appropriate to preserve both the appearance and the reality of equal justice," Colson's lawyers said in an 11-page motion filed with Gesell.

Besides his one-to three-year prison term, which he began serving July 8, Colson was fined $5,000. In addition, he has been disbarred as a lawyer in the District of Columbia.

Lawyers for Colson also made formal request for a pardon from President Ford. The White House referred the pardon request to the Justice Department, where officials have said that under traditional practices, the request came too early and was unlikely to be acted upon for more than a year.

Colson's lawyers, in requesting a reduced penalty, noted that former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew escaped a jail term when he did not challenge a single charge of income tax evasion.

Colson's motion was delivered to the U.S. District Court on the fifth day of the cover-up trial. Jury selection in the trial continued with no indication that the first testimony would be heard before the end of the week.

Even then, there are some issues that Sirica may decide must be worked out before testimony is heard. For example, lawyers for former President Richard M. Nixon have asked that subpoenas for Nixon's testimony be quashed.

As of last Thursday, Sirica had won agreement from defense and prosecution lawyers on only five potential jurors.

Today, Sirica continues questioning potential jurors on their general awareness of Watergate. Sources familiar with the closed courtroom session say the judge has been emphasizing heavily whether or not the prospective jurors watched either the televised Senate Watergate hearings or the House Judiciary impeachment hearings.

Once the jury is selected, its members will live in a motel and travel back and forth to the U.S. District Courthouse. Rare contacts with family members or anyone else not connected with the case will be made in the company of U.S. marshals.

Despite the anticipated three-to four-month length of the trial, Sirica has found a large pool of Washington residents willing to endure the inconvenience. An initial group of more than 300 potential jurors is down to more than 140.

The five defendants are accused in connection with plotting to cover up the original Watergate break-in investigation. Among them are three of Nixon's closest aides at the time, H.R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman and former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell.

The other two defendants are former assistant Atty. Gen. Robert C. Mardian and Washington attorney Kenneth W. Parkinson. Both had worked for the 1972 Nixon re-election committee.

Ford, French president will hold meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing will hold their first meeting in mid-December on the Caribbean island of Martinique, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen announced today.

Nessen, whose announcement trailed by several hours one from Giscard d'Estaing's office, said the meeting "will provide the two leaders with the opportunity to review issues of mutual interest."

The dates for the conference on Martinique, which is French territory, are Dec. 14-16.

Ford plans to meet the president of Mexico on the Texas-Mexican border later this month and will travel to Japan and South Korea in November. He has indicated he expects to have early meetings with heads of other west European governments.

High court facing over 2,000 cases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court held a brief ceremonial session today to mark its return from summer recess to a docket whose more than 2,000 cases raise issues ranging from the death penalty to presidential impoundment of funds.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger presided at the five-minute ceremony, which was followed by the admission of 14 lawyers to practice before the court, the only business of the day.

Burger's right ring finger was in a cast, the only visible sign of injuries he received in a bicycle accident last month.

The court plans to spend the rest of the week in closed conferences considering a record 992 requests for action. Last year the total was 976.

The court will announce decisions on some of these matters on its first decision day, Oct. 15.

Most of them are appeals, which the court must decide whether to hear. They are among about 1,000 petitions for hearing that were filed during the summer recess. The court already had more than 1,000 such requests pending at the end of its last term.

The court already has agreed to hear 89 cases beginning next week.

Among the cases it is expected to schedule for argument later are the appeals of seven men condemned to die for murder and rape in North Carolina.

The court ruled more than two years ago that the death penalty as then carried out was unconstitutional. The North Carolina Supreme Court, however, ruled that this invalidated only that portion of the state's death penalty law that made the penalty optional with the jury. The state's courts have continued to mete out death sentences by treating the law as mandatory.

Lawyers for the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, which is appealing on behalf of the defendants, most of whom are black, have contended that North Carolina courts are unconstitutionally evading the Supreme Court ruling. They also argue that capital punishment is unconstitutional under any kind of law because it is cruel and unusual punishment.

Presidential impoundments, struck down by lower federal courts in a number of cases, will come before the Supreme Court for the first time in connection with a New York City dispute. The city challenged former President Richard M. Nixon's action in withholding $9 billion appropriated by Congress for water pollution control.

Appeal is filed in prostitution case

Lenora Scorggins, 22, 308 West Pettis has filed an appeal in Pettis County Circuit Court on charges against her of soliciting for the purpose of prostitution.

She was arrested by the Sedalia police Sept. 10 for the alleged offense and had a trial in Municipal Court on Sept. 27. At the trial she pleaded not guilty, but was found guilty and and find $250.

Figures corrected

Due to a typographical error, two incorrect figures appeared in the article on local petroleum prices and supplies which appeared in the Sunday Democrat-Capital.

The correct price of propane gas at the Adams-Riley Rural Gas, Inc., 401 West Main, ranges between 24 and 25 cents. This is 11 to 12 cents cheaper than last year's mid-winter high of 36 cents, it was indicated. It was mistakenly reported in the original story that the company's current prices were 25 cents cheaper than last year's highest price.

Charges may be filed in apparent kidnap hoax case

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — The Buchanan County prosecuting attorney is expected to weigh possible charges in connection with an apparent kidnap hoax Saturday.

Police Detective Leo Schott said he would take his information to the prosecutor today. He said he had interviewed the alleged victim, Mrs. Gelnn Edward Walker, 28, as well as two men and another young woman.

"They were drinking in a tavern, and it was discussed among all four of them before he made the first call," Schott reported. "It was so she could stay out all night. They thought it was funny."

Schott said he had worked on the case 13 hours and didn't agree.

Mrs. Walker's husband reported he got a call while at work late Friday night, saying Mrs. Walker was being held for $1,000 ransom. A second call about 1:10 a.m. warned that the two Walker children also were being held and directed Walker to leave $1,000 in a sack on the outside steps of a downtown hotel at 5 a.m. A sack was left but no one arrived to pick it up.

Mrs. Walker arrived at her home near Rosendale, Mo., 20 miles north of St. Joseph, near 7 a.m. and agreed to come to St. Joseph to discuss the alleged kidnaping with police.

Sedalia woman is injured in accident

A Sedalia woman remained in Bothwell Hospital Monday for observation after she was treated for lacerations she suffered from an auto accident Sunday.

Ruth Ann Cook, 46, Route 4, was listed in satisfactory condition at noon Monday.

She was the driver of a car headed north on Limit near Fifth about noon Sunday when she attempted to make a right turn onto Fifth. A truck behind her failed to stop in time on wet pavement and skidded into her 1973 Cadilac, pushing the car into a utility pole.

Cook was taken to the hospital by ambulance and her car was towed from the scene. The driver of the truck, John J. Linscott, Kansas City, was uninjured.

Camdenton riot fails to develop

CAMDENTON, Mo. (AP) — Authorities here say a riot that had been anticipated over the weekend failed to develop.

"We had about as quiet a night as we've ever had around here," said police chief Loyd Richardson. "I think this thing has pretty well blown over by now."

Some 60 lawmen from Lake of the Ozarks communities moved into the town Saturday to aid the five policemen and five Camden County sheriff's officers against possible trouble.

Richardson said the incident stemmed from a tavern fight Thursday night between some local men and some from Lebanon, Mo.

After a bomb threat and a warning that some men from Lebanon were coming "to clean up the town," Richardson called for help from officers in surrounding communities to stop a "potential riot."

LLOYD LEWELLEN
Area Farm Management Agent

University of Missouri Extension Centers
Henry - Johnson - Lafayette - Pettis

I have been asked to be on the "Open Mike" program at 8:15 a.m. Saturday at the KDRO radio station with Darry Brownfield.

I would appreciate receiving questions for via phone Saturday, or write me your questions now. I would like questions from consumers as well as agricultural producers.

Fish pick up

If you have ordered fish through the Extension office, bring container and pick up your fish at Liberty Park at 2 p.m. Wednesday.

Start studying

It's interesting to note how different farmers handled their dollars (income and expenses) as the end of the last year approached. It appeared that many really started their income tax management decisions about September or October 1973. Since it's that time again, rainy days might be the time to start studying records to see where they stand tax wise. Records thus far indicate most could do some things — some are way ahead of last year's income while others are way down. It's going to be a rather strange income tax year for farmers.

Plants indoors

Any house plants still outdoors should be brought in promptly. Before bringing plants indoors, a thorough examination is in order. First, check the pot and soil mass contained in it. Insects or other pests may have found refuge there, and while harmless outdoors, they may cause root damage when confined to this limited soil for an entire winter. Such pests would include sow bugs (pill bugs), millipedes, earthworms, slugs, and crickets. Many of these pests will hide in the soil or drainage material close to the drainage holes at the base of the pot.

To make sure all are removed, the soil ball should be knocked from the pot carefully. Handle it very carefully so the soil ball is not broken up and can be returned to the pot as soon as any pests have been removed. The soil mass is easiest to remove when it is moist — not too soggy, not too dry. Plants should be watered and allowed to drain well at least a day before knocking them from the pot. After the root mass has been returned to the pot, examine the tops. Aphids, spider mites, grasshoppers or other garden pests may be hiding among the leaves.

Do not feel that plants have to be repotted for the winter. Most plants face a major adjustment, and root damage by repotting at the time they are moved into the house will make this adjustment more difficult. Only if a plant has grown excessively during the summer and is extremely potbound or out of proportion with the pot should it be repotted at this time.

Remove plants carefully from the pot, trying not to break the soil ball. Place them into the next size pot, and fill around the soil ball with rich sterilized soil. Proper location in doors is important to keep houseplants in good condition. Light is a very important factor. If a plant is needed in a poorly lighted spot, try to develop a rotation with a similar plant in a well-lighted spot. Keep the plant in the poorly lighted spot for one or two weeks, then switch with the plant in the better location. When this is done throughout the winter, both plants can be kept in acceptable condition.

Compost pile

Now is the season of the year to rake leaves and remove plant growth from around the lawn. Disposing of this material may be a problem. Try to look at the disposal problem positively. If there are any places in your yard or garden where the soil isn't as good as it might be, perhaps you could solve both problems at once by making a compost pile.

Every lawn can provide leaves and grass clippings for a compost pile. If you have a garden, you will also have plenty of vines and stalks and other plant parts to add to the pile. It's a lot easier to use them at home than to haul them away or pile them for a trash collector.

To start a compost pile, prepare an enclosure about three feet in height and width and any length desired. Place this confinement structure in a shaded place. Place 6 to 12 inches of plant material in the enclosure. Add water if the material is dry. Also add one and one-half cups of a fertilizer (10-5-5 analysis, if available) for each bushel of organic matter. Cover with one inch of soil. Continue to alternate layers of organic matter, fertilizer and soil, ending with soil on top of the completed pile. Keep the pile moist, but not wet. Decomposition may take a year. Use the compost pile after thoroughly decomposed.

You can use compost material as a low grade fertilizer by mixing in into the soil. Compost material adds nutrients and improves waterholding capacity and texture of the soil.

Hog records

Hog enterprise records on 19 area farms show why todays narrow corn hog ratio disturbs hog producers.

During the last 15 years the corn hog ratio has averaged above 16 to 1, (value of 100 lbs. of live hog equal to 16 bushels of corn). The long time corn hog ratio, is thought to be, about that level to cover the average producers costs and keep him in the business, says John Morehead, Extension farm management specialist.

In 1973, 19 area farmers keeping detailed enterprise records on Extension Farm Records Program produced efficiently enough to cover all costs at a corn hog ratio of 15.4. Feed conversion on these farms was, 460 pounds of feed required to produce 100 pounds of pork. These farms produced an average of over 212,000 pounds of live hog, or a larger output than the average producers.

Now the corn hog ratio is almost 10 to 1. This is lower than has existed for any year during the last 15. During 1971, which was the last really poor income year in the average hog business the ratio averaged 11.9. At such a ratio with todays higher costs these 19 area farms will do well to cover cash costs. Some may forfeit their labor or return an investment while continuing to produce the pork supply for many many people. The average pork producer will fare worse if he continues production until costs and prices change.

No radiation exposure found

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Authorities here say the atomic energy commission has apparently discovered no radiation exposure to persons in the area following shipment of a damaged industrial radiography camera through here.

Mickey Owen, Greene County sheriff, said the camera was damaged during a trip from Burlington, Mass., to Tulsa, Okla. Officials investigated the transfer of the damaged camera to different trucks at Stroudsburg, Pa., and Springfield to determine if any workers had been exposed.

The truck was inspected in Tulsa last Wednesday and radiation was present inside and outside the truck.

Auto on its way to Soviets

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union is on the threshold of the automobile age and seems ready to fulfill the dreams of millions of its citizens — to have a car.

It's going to be a long time before everybody in this vast land of 235 million people who wants a car can have one, but "avtomobilizatsiya" or automobilization is on the way.

Nearly 700,000 cars will be sold to private owners this year, and there is talk of one million cars a year in the near future.

Those are puny figures compared to the United States where 895,000 cars were sold to Americans way back in 1915. Yet only four years ago, in 1970, just 125,000 cars were sold to private owners in the Soviet Union.

There are only about 2.5 million private cars in the Soviet Union, compared to some 94 million in the United States and 16.4 million in West Germany.

Even with that low number there are obvious signs of the tiny auto explosion:

—A foreigner who could drive to Leningrad two years ago at a prudent 60 miles per hour and never look back is now frequently passed by Russians whizzing along in new Zhigulis — the Soviet version of the Italian compact Fiat 124.

—On a summer weekend the two-lane road south to Kharkov is clogged with drivers, many with camping equipment lashed to luggage racks.

—One can no longer count on finding a parking space directly in front of the Bolshoi Theater 10 minutes before the curtain goes up.

—A foreigner driving a Zhiguli is taunted by a prideful Russian: "Hey, that's one of our cars. Where is your Ford?"

—Tiny racing stripes, curtained rear windows, stuffed animals and pillows, and Fiat mudguards are appearing as "customizing" touches to Soviet cars. And the ultimate in machismo is to paint a number on the front doors and place a pair of plastic racing helmets on the rear window ledge.

Why shouldn't Ivan Ivanovich get the same feeling as Kremlin leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, who once told a foreign journalist: "When I'm behind the wheel I can relax. When it's I who drives, I have the impression nothing can happen to me."

The urge to mobility, convenience, to master one's own fate, escape the herd — all have fueled a Soviet love affair with the auto. A Soviet newspaper reported a majority of car owners said they needed a car "to get away from it all."

Some Communist party ideologists have warned against a growth of "private ownership individualism", apparently worried about what Russians on wheels will mean for the "new Soviet man" supposedly being molded here. However, the leadership has apparently decided to make the car a symbol of efforts to meet long-frustrated consumer demands.

The Soviets are worried about pollution, traffic congestion, rising accident rates and the host of other ills that come with cars. But they are still at an early stage since the road to genuine mass auto ownership on a Western scale is blocked by shortage of cars, service and repair facilities, spare parts, garages and good roads.

Work as normal in the vice president's office

WASHINGTON (AP) — They still answer the phones "office of the vice president," even though the nation doesn't now have a vice president.

That's because "we still have a constitutional responsibility," explained Walter Mote, who heads the six-person staff that continues to occupy two vice presidential offices on Capitol Hill.

Mote, formerly administrative assistant to vice presidents Spiro T. Agnew and Gerald R. Ford, said the responsibility is to receive and log for the Federal Archives all official communications directed to the Senate.

As Ford did before him, Vice President-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller is carefully avoiding any contact with the vice presidential office before he is confirmed.

When the former New York governor visited the Dirksen Office Building two days after his Aug. 20 nomination by President Ford, Mote invited him inside the office.

"I'm superstitious or I'd come in," Rockefeller said, declining the offer.

Meanwhile, Senate President Pro Tempore James O. Eastland, D-Miss., temporarily is receiving the vice presidential pay rate, instead of his senatorial rate, plus the vice president's limousine and expense allowances. The vice president's salary is $62,500 a year, $13,000 higher than a senator's annual salary.

Value of exports expected to be near last year's record

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The volume of U.S. Farm exports will be down sharply this fiscal year but soaring prices for wheat, corn and other commodities will put their value near the record $21.3 billion of last season, an Agriculture Department expert said Monday.

H. Reiter Webb Jr. of the Department's Foreign Agricultural Service said the value of all farm exports for the year ending next June 30 is expected to be just under $21 billion, making it the second biggest farm export year in terms of value.

Wheat and flour exports will drop 15 to 20 per cent from last year, Webb said in a weekly issue of Foreign Agriculture published by his agency.

"However, an increase in unit prices probably will offset some of the reduced tonnage, so that the total value of wheat and wheat flour exports is expected to decline by only about 10 per cent," he said.

Last fiscal year wheat exports totaled $4.7 billion. Thus, a 10 per cent cut in value would mean this season's exports still would be worth around $4.2 billion or more.

Because of this year's drought damage to the Midwest corn crop and reduced livestock feeding in many parts of the world—and larger grain supplies in some areas—U.S. feed grain exports are expected to slide precipitously from nearly 44 million metric tons last season to as low as 24.7 million in 1974-75.

"However, as in the case with wheat, prices are expected to increase sharply, and the value of feed grain exports is likely to drop by less than 20 per cent from the level of fiscal 1974," Webb said.

The analysis, however, was based on U.S. crop production figures and export indications as of Sept. 1. Severe frosts more recently have hurt late corn and soybeans in much of the midwest, and new harvest figures to be announced by USDA this week could change the export outlook even further.

Also the projections assume there will be no U.S. export controls. The administration has expressed opposition to export restraints, and key farm members of Congress also are against curbs.

Webb said soybean exports in 1974-75 could exceed last year's volume. And with higher prices, he said, their value could jump to more than $4 billion, compared with $3.3 billion last year.

Cotton exports are expected to decline, but higher prices are expected to keep values at around last year's $1.3 billion. A similar prediction was made for tobacco exports, with higher prices offsetting reduced volume to keep the value at about $750 million.

Rice, however, is in a different situation, Webb said. Record U.S. supplies point to lower prices. But rice exports are expected to increase in volume and thus mean the crop's export value may be held at last season's $750 million level.

Fresh pineapple will be available

HONOLULU (AP) — Representatives of Hawaii's two major pineapple producing companies, Dole and Del Monte, contend that mainland buyers are going to continue to have fresh Hawaiian pineapple at their markets.

This is their view despite reports that the two companies are phasing out their operations in Hawaii for cheaper labor markets in foreign countries.

"The future for the Hawaiian pineapple is in airshipping it fresh to the mainland," says Emil Schneider of Castle and Cooke, parent company of Dole. "Now that we have new low-cost agreements with the airlines on shipping the fruit, people on the East Coast are now getting good quality pineapple . . . something they never experienced before."

Many of the reports concerning the two companies pulling out of Hawaii were sparked by company announcements several months ago that they were closing down their pineapple operations on the island of Molokai at the end of 1975. Dole has 12,000 acres of land in pineapples there and Del Monte about 10,000, the spokesmen said.

The Del Monte Corp., citing an "increase in the world's demand for pineapple," now says it will continue the Molokai operation until Jan. 31, 1978. Dole, however, will close down on Molokai as earlier announced.

While the companies are expanding their fresh-fruit shipping operation, they are, however, cutting back on their canning operations here.

The labor market in Hawaii for canning is too expensive to compete with labor in Southeast Asia and Africa, the companies say. A union laborer in Hawaii is paid $2.98 an hour, while pineapple workers in the Philippines and Taiwan draw as little as 15 cents an hour.

Labor standards will be explained

Albert Godes, assistant area director of the U.S. Department of Labor, will explain details of the new Fair Labor Standards Act at a Chamber of Commerce general membership banquet to be held at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at the Ramada Inn.

Tickets are available at the Chamber office, 113 East Fourth, or from Mrs. Mary Jane Wilson, Chamber governmental and civic affairs director. Reservations must be secured for the banquet.

DID YOU KNOW?

Beef varies in quality more than any other meat. Making sure of the quality you get when you buy in quantity, then, is even more important for beef than for other meats.

Each USDA beef grade is a measure of a distinct level of quality—and it takes eight grades to span the range. They are: USDA Prime, Choice, Good, Standard, Commercial, Utility, Cutter, and Canner. The three lower grades, USDA Utility, Cutter, and Canner are seldom, if ever, sold at retail but are used instead to make ground beef and manufactured meat items such as frankfurters.

The highest grade, USDA Prime, is used mostly by hotels and restaurants, but a small amount is sold at retail and by dealers supplying freezer meat. The grade most widely sold at retail is USDA Choice. It is produced in the greatest volume and most consumers find this level of quality to their liking.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

A fanatic sect in India known as the Thugs killed and robbed an estimated two million people from 1550 to 1850. The Thug cult killed victims only by strangulation as part of their religious worship of Kali, goddess of destruction. The sect was suppressed by the British during the 1800s but the word is still commonly used for hoodlums, The World Almanac says.

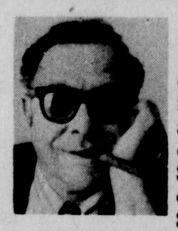
Saving energy and losing neighbors

WASHINGTON — In his closing speech last week to the economic summit, President Ford told Americans to "... make up a list of 10 ways you can save energy and fight inflation. Little things that have become habits, but that don't really affect your health and happiness ... Exchange your family's list with your neighbors — and send me a copy."

Dear Mr. President,



Buchwald

Enclosed please find my list of ways we could save energy and fight inflation. As soon as I made it, I went over to see my neighbor, Schlumberger, and asked him for his list. Schlumberger hadn't made up his yet, which didn't surprise me. It takes him three weeks to cut his lawn and he still hasn't returned the lawn chairs he borrowed in June.

"Schlumberger," I said, "the President has asked us how we can save energy and fight inflation. My wife and I notice you always leave the light on in your bathroom. Now it's obvious to us that there isn't somebody in the bathroom ALL the time. Why couldn't you turn the light out when no one is there?"

Instead of Schlumberger accepting this in the spirit in which it was given, he said something like "We'll keep our (and then he said a terrible word) bathroom lights on all night long if we want to."

I then went to item No. 2. "I notice you always seem to drive to work alone. Is there any reason you can't car pool it?"

Well, Mr. President, I want you to know Schlumberger started screaming and yelling and telling me to mind my own (and then there was that word again) business. I couldn't believe someone would be so selfish during a crisis of this proportion.

I was tempted not to bring up item No. 3, but I decided the interests of the country came first so I said, "It appears the fuel truck comes around to your house every two months. The oil man told my wife you keep your thermostat at 74 degrees. Why couldn't you close off a few rooms in the winter and turn the dial down to 67 degrees?"

I want to tell you, Mr. President, you would have thought I asked Schlumberger to go streaking down Pennsylvania Avenue at high noon. He said he would keep the (put the word here) thermostat at any (the word again) temperature he (word) pleased.

I had a good mind to just walk out but I still had a few more things on my list. "Schlumberger," I said, "that gaslight you have in front of your house — it seems to me it's just a habit with you. Does it really do anything to affect your health or happinesss?"

I guess I touched a sore nerve because Schlumberger asked me to get out of his (I wish he had a larger vocabulary) house.

I know it comes as a shock to you, Mr. President, that there are such thin-skinned people in this country. I went to the next item on my list which was what Schlumberger was doing about inflation. I said, "My wife and I went through your garbage last night and we were shocked to see how much good food your family wastes and...."

Mr. President, I know you're not going to believe this, but Schlumberger grabbed me by the back of my coat and pants and pushed me right out the front steps. I almost broke my arm.

Anyway, here's the list you asked for. Maybe you can do more with Schlumberger than I can. As you can see from my account, he's not much for jawboning. He's really a first-class (use any word you want).

Sincerely,
Art Buchwald

Problems for the milk men

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

DISNEY WORLD, Fla. — There once was a time, unlikely as this may seem, when I briefly owned a cow. Or vice versa. This was a real, live cow, with four legs, four faucets, and a belligerent look on her homely face. Her name was Tugboat Annie, and her game was kicking buckets.

Time tends to plaster over a checkered past. I had not thought of Annie for nearly 30 years. But the memory of those baleful eyes and that bawling bullhorn voice came back a week ago, when I went with several hundred milk producers who had come to Disney World to drown their troubles in Grade A homogenized Scotch. I had one Annie. The dairy farmers have 10 million Annies, more or less, and they all spell trouble.

Kilpatrick

Alan Greenspan, the President's doctor of public relations, recently told a gathering of poor people that percentage wise, stockbrokers are suffering worse than any other group. Dr. Greenspan has not met the milkmen. All farmers have it rough. But some have it rougher than others. These days, if you are into milk, you are into misery.

Part of the problem — the least part, but the most painful part — is a problem of public image. Say "milk" in Washington, and the media boys begin to snort and roll their eyes. It isn't fair, but who says life is fair? My brothers of the press see the milk producers as a gang of wheeler dealer salesmen with quarts of cream to give away. A suspicion remains that back in 1971 the milkmen were bent on bribing a president. Campaign records suggest that they are out to butter up every guy in town. Even Peter Rodino, whose Newark constituents never have seen a cow, got a bucket of campaign cash.

Presumably, Rodino was on the cream list because his Judiciary Committee handles anti-trust bills. The milkmen know all about anti-trust bills. They are up to their udders in anti-trust suits. These proceedings might be bearable if the industry were grazing in high clover, but the industry is down to crab grass and thistles.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin dug up some doleful statistics. Twenty years ago Wisconsin had 127,000 dairy farmers. Today there are fewer than 53,000. Eighty per cent of the Wisconsin farm operators are over 45 and 38 per cent are 55 or older. Over the past 19 months, 3,800 dairy farmers have gone out of business in Wisconsin alone. In the nation as a whole, the number of milk producing farms is expected to drop from 400,000 today to 200,000 by 1980.

The reasons are economic. In the past couple of years, dairymen have witnessed a 100 per cent increase in fertilizer costs. The price of feed concentrates recently jumped 18 per cent in a single month. Between 1948 and 1972 net farm income went up by 21 per cent; farm wages went up by 400 per cent.

These burdens too might be bearable if domestic demand wear soaring also. Alas, the milk producers are plagued by imported competition. Since the first of the year, five billion pounds of milk equivalent have come in from abroad, including 100 million pounds of cheese. Most of this come from Common Market countries that subsidize their milk producers.

U.S. producers benefit from their own subsidy, in the form of a support price at 80 per cent of parity, but they don't benefit much. The dairymen who met here are hoping to see the rate go to 90 per cent — Sen. Nelson is plumping for 100 per cent — but they look at Secretary Butz and they see the eyes of Tugboat Annie. When it comes to raising parity, the secretary is as cold as a cow barn on Christmas.

Whenever the dairymen look up from their buckets, they see that another doctor is skimming off some publicity by saying mean things about milk. A glass of cold milk is the most wholesome natural food in the world, but to some doctors milk spells cholesterol, obesity, and the galloping botts. Between the Dutch and the botts are the bankers, hiking their interest rates. Every time the milkmen raise their price, they stand accused of exploiting little children.

I got rid of my Tugboat Annie, but the professional producers are stuck with theirs. They can't even give their herds away. Here in the fantasy realm of Disney World, these are hard realities to dispel. Unlike Annie, they seem to be here to stay.

Teddy just delayed or out for good?

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy may have done more than withdraw from consideration in the 1976 presidential race. He may have removed himself as a contender in 1980 as well, and possibly beyond.

Much depends upon which party wins the presidency two years from now.

If it is the Republicans—and Gerald Ford, the likely GOP nominee, will be a formidable opponent for anybody—then, of course, the field will be thrown wide open in 1980 for hopefuls of both parties.

Kennedy will be only 48 in 1980, still young by presidential standards. If he is re-elected to the Senate in 1976, as he probably will be, he will have had six more years of experience as the senior senator from Massachusetts, counting from now. The Chappaquiddick scandal will be six more years in the past. The heavy family responsibilities, which Kennedy gave as the major reason for his decision not to seek the presidency in 1976, will presumably be lessened.

However, if the Democratic candidate, whoever he will be, wins the election in 1976, it can be assumed that as incumbent president he will be nominated for a second term in 1980, barring death or voluntary retirement.

In that event, it would be 1984 before Kennedy would once again be a talked-about candidate. At 52, he would be a mature if not elder statesman. And Chappaquiddick then would be 15 years in the past.

But even the best presidential timber deteriorates with time. Even the most charismatic personality grows stale.

There have been other men in the country's history who were outstandingly qualified for the presidency, other quadrennial contenders who for one reason or another never caught that gold ring on the merry-go-round, until time and fate passed them by. Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun and Daniel Webster are among those who come to mind.

There is also the possibility that Edward Kennedy simply does not want to be president. Not every man does.

Anyway, as Watergate has so dramatically demonstrated, it is foolhardy to speculate about political fortunes even months into the future, let alone a full decade.

There is always the unexpected, the unforeseeable, which can turn everything upside-down overnight. (NEA)

Study blames Nixon for oil cost rises

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — A confidential congressional study blames the Nixon administration for permitting the oil companies to gouge almost $9 billion out of motorists and other consumers in the last year.

Four dubious and perhaps illegal White House decisions were responsible for the $9 billion loss, according to a study ordered by consumer watchdog Rep. John Moss, C.-Calif. In addition, the report reveals that Congress itself directly caused a $2.6 billion ripoff.

These five pro-industry edicts not only gobbled up the consumers' pocket money at the pump, but they also served to boost inflationery pressure and allowed the major oil companies to increase their profits by an average of 71 per cent, right in the middle of the oil crisis.

Here are the five rapacious rulings as detailed in the Library of Congress Economics Division study prepared for Moss, chairman of the House Commerce and Finance subcommittee:

✓ The Cost of Living Council allowed the oil companies to increase "old oil" from existing wells from $4.25 to $5.25 even though "this is oil that cost, roughly, less than $1 to produce." The consumer was stuck with $1.9 billion in excess oil bills. The Administration had claimed the Treasury Department had documents to justify the increase. But now, Treasury Secretary William Simon has privately conceded to Moss that no "Treasury or Federal Energy Office papers were presented" at the Cost of Living meeting where the decision was made.

✓ Originally, the Cost of Living Council froze oil prices at $4.25 per barrel in 1972, a price some 30 per cent higher than previous levels. Then, in August, 1973, the council freed prices on newly discovered oil to encourage exploration. This allowed the price to zoom to $10.50 a barrel even though costs to the oil firms were seldom more than $2 per barrel. The consumer costs: $3.25 billion.

✓ For every barrel of new oil produced, the council let Big Oil take the price lid off one barrel of old oil. This was also designed to encourage exploration. This questionable boondoggle cost consumers $2.23 billion.

✓ The Federal Energy Office let retailers raise their profit margin from 7.25 cents per gallon to 11 cents per gallon because of gasoline shortages. But now the pumps are full and the motorists' wallets are still being tapped by the high margins. The cost to oil and gasoline users: $2.89 billion.

✓ Congress is to blame, the Moss study notes, for exempting oil wells producing less than 10 barrels a day from price controls. While this may have kept some marginal wells in production, it cost the consumers $2.64 billion.

The Moss receport concluded by noting a "ripple effect" caused when oil prices "have dragged coal and intrastate natural gas prices up with them."

Since everything from peanuts to power plants are produced or fueled by oil, coal or natural gas, this has meant that every price rise can, in part, be tied to the oil price hikes. The cozened consumer, therefore, has been tapped twice: Once with the $11.5 billion loss and once with the higher general prices this rise has brought on.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: Inside informants tell us that the Central Intelligence Agency tipped off the shah of Iran in August that five of his senior officers, including Gen. Kiumarc Saleh, were plotting to overthrow him. All five were immediately jailed for "misuse of power." It may be merely a coincidence that the U.S. ambassador to Iran, Richard Helms, was a former CIA director. The CIA would not comment on the charge ... Government lawyers, digging through the small print in the Foreign Assistance Act, have now found legal justification for ex-President Nixon's gift of a military helicopter last summer to Egypt's President Anwar Sadat. At the request of Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., government auditors had questioned Nixon's authority to give away the helicopter. But, the lawyers have now authorized the Agency for International Development to pay the $3 million bill, which also covers spare parts and labor. They cited a provision which authorizes grants "essential to the national interest"... The White House mail is running heavily against President Ford's decision to grant "conditional amnesty" to Vietnam war resisters. Nevertheless, he has passed the word to subordinates that he wants the amnesty board to take it easy on the young men who want to return to their country. He wants them to be given the benefit of any doubts.

ILLEGAL MAILING: Rep. John Wydler, R.-N.Y., has just mailed 120,000 newsletters to his Long Island constituents at a cost to the taxpayers of $12,000 postage.

The newsletter violated three regulations for free mailings. First, it contained a photograph of a member of Wydler's family. Second, three of the four pages featured campaign-style pictures which took up more than 20 per cent of each page. And, third, a masthead photo of the congressman is larger than the rules permit.

Wydler said he had been advised it was permissible to use the picture of his son and that he was in "substantial compliance" with the photo guidelines. He conceded that the masthead photo was too large.

In contrast to Wydler, Rep. Don Young, R.-Alaska, burned 105,000 of his newsletters because they did not comply with the same free mailing regulations.

Sixty mailbags were already on their way to the airport when an aide learned the pictures in the newsletter took up too much space. Young immediately had the mailbags intercepted and the newsletters destroyed.

British comedy series debuts

NEW YORK (AP) — First, the good news: "Monty Python's Flying Circus," a hit British comedy series, will be set loose in the U.S. this month. Now, the bad news: Only 18 public TV stations are carrying it initially.

But Time-Life Films, Inc., which is distributing the BBC-produced program, says it hopes to sell the 13-week series to additional stations across the U.S. in coming weeks.

American viewers got a brief look at the Python emporium this year on NBC's "Midnight Special" show and "Dean Martin's Comedyworld" summer series.

But for those who missed it, I guess the only way to characterize the show is to say it defies logic, dashes through various skits more briskly than a speeding locomotive and combines live action with brilliant, bizarre montage animation.

The first show, which opened Sunday on WNET-TV here and will start on most of the other Python stations this week, was a mind-bender extraordinaire.

For example, it had a skit entitled: "How to recognize trees from quite a long way away." Then it showed a tree called a larch. Then, as part of the course, it went into a courtroom to cover the trial of a man named Larch, charged with a parking offense.

The prosecutor said: "I now call the late Arthur Aldridge."

"Is there any relevance in questioning the deceased?" inquired the judge as a coffin was brought in and put on the witness stand.

The witness, the prosecutor explained, "is virtually dead, m'lord. He's not completely dead, but he's not at all well." He also noted the witness answers questions by knocking on the side of the coffin.

"Would you be prepared to say," he subsequently asked Aldridge, "that you are, as it were, or definitely is known as, in a manner of speaking, dead?" There was no knock of reply.

"Are you considering the question or are you just dead?"

Still no knock. The barrister walked over, opened the coffin, thought for a while, then turned to the judge. "No further questions, m'lord."

Like I say, logic isn't the show's strong point. There's not even a real Monty Python. It just seemed a handy name for the show, created by five young Englishmen and Terry Gilliam, an American artist.

The series is typical British lunacy in th best sense. Be sure to catch it if it ever plays on public TV in your town.

4. 5. A candidate shall establish specific expenditure limitations upon any political committee whose expenditures, if made, would be attributable to the candidate for the purpose of this act, and may limit the total dollar amount of anonymous contributions which a committee may accept on the candidate's behalf as provided for in subsections 2 and 3 of Section 4 of this act. Such specific expenditure limitations must be in writing and delivered to the treasurer of the committee.

6. Expenditures made by a committee in opposition to a candidate shall not be attributed to any candidate or to any committee supporting a candidate for the purpose of compliance with the provisions of this section, provided the Commission determines that such expenditures were not made for the purpose of supporting another candidate or candidates, but all contributions and expenditures of such committee shall be reported in accordance with the requirements of Section 7 of this act.

Section 4. 1. No annoymous contribution of more than five dollars shall be made by any person and no anonymous contribution or more than five dollars shall be accepted by any candidate or political committee. If any anonymous contribution of more than five dollars is received, it shall immediately be returned to the contributor, if known and if the contributor is not known, the candidate or political committee treasurer shall immediately transmit that portion of the contribution which exceeds five dollars to the state treasurer, and therupon that portion of the anonymous contribution shall escheat to the state. Candidates and committee treasurers shall keep with their accounts, records of each anonymous contribution received, and each transmitted to the state treasurer, including the amount thereof, the date received and the date transmitted.

2. The maximum aggregate amount of anonymous contributions which may be accepted by any candidate, and by political committees supporting his candidacy shall be five hundred dollars, or one percent of the spending limitation set forth in Section 3 of this act for the candidate whichever is higher. In computing the total anonymous contributions which have been received for the support of a candidate, all anoymous contributions received by the candidate, and by political committees supporting his candidacy, shall be considered. If any anonymous contribution is received which exceeds the foregoing limitation on anonymous contribution, it shall immediately be returned to the contributor, if known, and if the contributor is not known, the candidate or political committee treasurer shall immediately transmit the contribution to the state treasurer, and thereupon such anonymous contribution shall escheat to the state.

3. Any funds which are contributed to a candidate or political committee which have been raised or collected in such a fashion by any person that the actual or beneficial contributor or contributors are not known (such as might occur when a voluntary contribution is taken up at an organization meeting) shall not be considered as anonymous contributions in computing the total amount of anonymous contributions which have been received by a candidate or committee, provided that such collected funds do not exceed one hundred dollars, and provided further that such collected funds shall be designated as having been contributed through the person who transmitted such funds to the candidate or committee. Such person shall submit, with such funds, a written statement setting forth when, where, and in what manner he collected such funds. No more than three percent of the candidate's total expenditure limitation as set forth in Section 3 of this act may be contributed in this manner. Any contribution over one hundred dollars raised in this manner or any amount in excess of three percent of the candidate's total expenditure limitation as set forth in Section 3 of this act may be contributed in this manner. Any contribution over one hundred dollars raised in this manner or any amount in excess of three percent of the candidate's total expenditure limitation as set forth in Section 3 of this act, raised in this manner, shall be transmitted by the candidate or political committee treasurer to the state treasurer, and escheat to the state.

4. A contribution made on behalf of another, or at the direction of another, or for the benefit of another, must be disclosed as such, and be made in both the name of the direct contributor and the beneficial owner of the contribution.

5. No labor organization, bank, trust company, or corporation, wherever organized, except not-for-profit corporations as defined in Chapter 355 RSMo whose articles of incorporation expressly authorize the exercise of any of the functions of a political committee as defined in this act, shall, directly or indirectly, make a contribution or expenditure in connection with any primary, general, or special election in support of or in opposition to any candidate or political committee, provided that nothing herein shall prohibit any individual or number of individuals who may be employees or members of a labor organization, bank trust company or corporation from acting singly or collectively on behalf of a candidate or candidates or political party or committee and from making contributions to a separate segregated fund to be utilized for political purposes by a corporation or labor organization provided that any such action or contribution is voluntary on their part and provided further, that it shall be unlawful for such a fund to make a contribution or expenditure by utilizing money or anything of value secured by physical force, job discrimination, financial reprisals, or the threat of force, job discrimination, or financial reprisal, or by dues, fees, or other monies required as a condition of membership in a labor organization or as a condition of employment, or by monies obtained in any commercial transaction.

6. No person shall make a cash contribution in the amount of fifty dollars or more unless the contribution is accompanied by a contribution statement on a form approved by the Commission. Such statement shall include:

(1) The full name and mailing address of the contributor;

(2) The date on which the contribution was made and the exact amount of the contribution;

(3) The name of the person who received the contribution on behalf of the candidate or political committee;

(4) The signature of the contributor.

One copy of the statement shall be given to the contributor, one copy retained by the candidate or the treasurer of the political committee, and one copy attached to the report required in Section 7 to be filed with the appropriate officer.

7. No candidate, member of the candidate's immediate family, or political committee supporting the candidacy of a candidate may make contributions in connection with the candidate's campaign for nomination or election to public office which would cause the aggregate amount of contributions or expenditures from the personal funds of the candidate and his immediate family to exceed:

(1) Thirty-five thousand dollars for candidates for public office filled by the voters at a state-wide election;

(2) For all other candidates, twenty-five thousand dollars or the candidate's total expenditure limitation as provided in subsection 2 of Section 3, whichever is the lesser amount.

8. No person other than a candidate or member of his immediate family shall make a contribution to a candidate or to a political committee acting in support of a candidate which would cause the aggregate amount contributed by that person to any one candidate or committees acting in his behalf to exceed ten thousand dollars in any one election or twenty percent of the total expenditure limitation for any elective office as provided in Section 3 of this act, whichever is less. In any calendar year, no person shall contribute, in the aggregate, more than fifty thousand dollars to all candidates and political committees covered by this act, and all political parties as that term is used and defined in Chapter 120, RSMo.

9. It is unlawful for any person to make a contribution or expenditure which exceeds the respective limitation applicable to such person as specified in subsections 7 and 8 of this section. Any person found guilty of violating the provisions of this subsection shall, in addition to other penalties provided by this act, pay to the state a sum equal to three times the amount the person contributed or expended in excess of the amount permitted; and each political committee which received such a contribution shall transmit any amount in excess of the amount permitted to the state treasurer with such amount to escheat to the state.

10. No candidate and no political committee shall accept a contribution of more than one hundred dollars in support of or in opposition to a candidate for public office from a political committee located within or without this state unless the contribution is accompanied by a written statement setting forth the full name and address of each person who contributed more than twenty-five dollars of the contribution and certified as true and correct by an officer of the contributing political committee.

Section 5. 1. Each political committee shall appoint a treasurer, who may be the candidate. No contributions shall be received or expenditures made to support or oppose a candidate by a political committee until the political committee certifies to the appropriate officer:

(1) The name and address of its treasurer, and

(2) The candidate or candidates it supports or opposes, and

(3) The name and address of its bank depository.

2. A committee which supports a candidate must notify the candidate of its support, and must provide the candidate with the same information required by this section to be sent to the appropriate officer, at the same time such report is made.

3. No contributions shall be received or expenditures made by a political committee except by or through the treasurer of the political committee.

4. A political committee may, with or without cause, remove its treasurer. In the event of the resignation or removal of a treasurer, the accounts and records shall be transferred in accordance with sound accounting principles and a closeout report signed by both the outgoing treasurer and the successor filed with the appropriate officer. The closeout report shall include total expenditures during the period in which the treasurer was in charge of the committee's accounts and records and total assets and liabilities at time of transfer to the successor. If the outgoing treasurer refuses to certify the closeout report, and in event of the death of a treasurer, a closeout report shall be signed by the successor and filed with appropriate officer and containing, to the best of his knowledge and belief, the information required in this subsection. The treasurer of each political committee shall certify on the basis of his knowledge and belief the correctness of each statement and report required to be filed under this act. The treasurer shall have the duty to exercise due diligence to assure the accuracy of each such report and statement. Failure to so certify or to excerise such due diligence is a violation of this act.

5. No political committee may expend funds on behalf of any candidate unless it has notified the candidate of the committee's intention to make such expenditures and has received from the candidate the specific expenditure limitations pursuant to subsection 5 of Section 3, except as permitted in subsection 4 of Section 3. The committee shall not spend more than the amount authorized by the candidate to be spent in behalf of his candidacy, and such expenditures shall constitute a violation of this act by the political committee. A candidate shall not be liable for, and shall not have attributed to him, any expenditures in excess of the restrictions he has placed upon the political committee.

6. If a candidate has more than one committee supporting his candidacy, he shall designate an official committee and shall file such designation with the appropriate officer, and all other committees and individuals supporting his candidacy shall remit to that committee reports of contributions and expenditures at such intervals as may be specified by the candidate. Notwithstanding the provisions of Section 8 of this act permitting a committee to exempt itself from the requirements of this act regarding the filing of reports with the appropriate officer, if more than one committee accepts contributions or makes expenditures on behalf of a candidate, any such committee other than the official committee, whether or not exempt, shall furnish to the official committee, not later than five days prior to the time the official committee is required to make any report required by Section 7 of this act, a written report containing all of the information required by Section 6 of this act.

7. Any expenditures for advertising or other promotional efforts or activities by a political committee on behalf of more than one candidate shall be attributable to the various candidates on a pro rata basis, in accordance with rules and regulations promulgated by the elections commission for the purpose of making such equitable assessments. Any advertising which does not endorse or support a particular candidate or candidates, but merely urges support for a certain political party when made by a political committee or political party, shall be deemed to promote the party, and shall not be assignable, even on a pro rata basis, to the candidates of the political party, but shall be reported in accordance with the provisions of Section 7 of this act.

Section 6. 1. Each candidate and each political committee shall maintain records and accounts which shall include:

(1) An itemized listing of all contributions received by the candidate or committee, the name and address of each contributor, the amount contributed, the date the contribution was received, and, if the contributor is a member of the candidate's immediate family, as that term is defined by this act, a statement indicating such relationship; and

(2) An itemized listing of all expenditures made by the candidate and committee, the name and address of the persons to whom the amounts were paid or promised, the purpose for which the expenditures were made, and the date of the expenditures; and

(3) An itemized listing of all anonymous contributions received by the candidate or committee, including those accepted, those returned to the donor, and those transmitted to the state treasurer, the amount of each such contribution, and if transmitted to the state treasurer, the date on which it was transmitted.

2. Each candidate who receives contributions and each committee shall open and maintain at least one savings or checking account in its own name in not more than one state or federal bank or savings institution located withing the state of Missouri, and deposit therein all contributions received. A candidate shall notify the appropriate officer of the name and address of his depository at the same time, and together with, the report required to be filed by candidates thirty days prior to an election.

3. Each candidate and each committee shall keep its campaign accounts current at least within ten days of the receipt of any contribution or the incurring of any expense. This requirement shall not exempt any candidate or committee, however, from the reporting requirements of this act which impose stricter accounting during periods immediately before a report must be filed. Candidates and committees shall comply with normal and accepted bookkeeping procedures, and with rules and regulations regarding such procedures as may be adopted by the Commission in furtherance of the provisions of this act. Any contribution not recorded as required by the provisions of this act shall be treated as any anonymous contribution exceeding the limitation and shall be transmitted immediately to the state treasurer and shall escheat to the state.

4. Any contribution which is offered, tendered, or received by a candidate or political committee and which is rejected by the recipient and returned to the donor within ten days need not be recorded or reported by the candidate or political committee pursuant to this act. Any rejected contribution not so returned to the donor within ten days shall be recorded and reported in the same manner as other contributions.

5. All records of contributions and expenditures shall be kept by each candidate and treasurer at least two years after the date of election to which the accounts refer, or at least two years after the last supplemental statement is filed under the provisions of this act, whichever is later, and the Commission and its duly authorized representatives may inspect such records at any time. At the written demand of the Commission a candidate or treasurer shall retain such records until an audit has been completed by the Commission, but such demand shall not require the retention of records for more than four years from the election.

6. The treasurer of a committee shall be responsible for complying with the requirements of this section regarding committees.

Section 7. 1. Every candidate shall file reports in writing with the appropriate officer, at the times prescribed in Section 9. The reports shall be subscribed and sworn to by the candidate before an officer authorized to administer oaths, setting forth in detail all contributions received and expenditures made by the candidate in endeavoring to secure his nomination or election. Each report shall set forth:

(1) An itemized listing of all contributions received by the candidate including transfers of funds from the candidate's previous campaign fund, the name and address of each contributor, the amount contributed, and the date the contribution was received; the names and addresses of persons who contributed an aggregate amount of twenty-five dollars or less need not be listed in the report, and instead may be grouped as one item and so identified;

(2) An itemized listing of all expenditures made by the candidate, the name and address of the person to whom the amounts were paid or promised, and the date of the expenditures; and

(3) An itemized listing of any anonymous contributions which were transmitted to the state treasurer, the amount of each such contribution, and the date transmitted; and

(4) A specific itemized listing of any business or investment in which the candidate or the candidate's spouse or minor children have a financial interest in excess of one thousand dollars.

(5) A specific listing of the source, by name and address, of any gifts or income in excess of one hundred dollars received by the candidate or the candidate's spouse or minor children during the preceding twelve months or the time of the last report, whichever is later.

(6) A specific listing of the source, by name and address, of any gifts, salaries, fees, or other income which for the twelve month period preceding the filing date individually or in the aggregate exceeds five hundred dollars which has been paid on behalf of or for services rendered by the candidate to any sole proprietorship, partnership or corporation in which the candidate or the candidate's spouse holds an interest of ten percent or more.

2. Every political committee shall file reports in writing with the appropriate officer, at the times as prescribed in Section 9. The reports shall be subscribed and sworn to by the treasurer of the committee before an officer authorized to administer oaths, setting forth in detail all contributions received and expenditures made by the committee in endeavoring to support or oppose any candidate's nomination or election. All contributions to and expenditures of a political party shall be reported by that party under the provisions of this subsection. Each report shall set forth:

(1) The amount on hand at the beginning of the reporting period and an itemized listing of all contributions received by the committee, the name and address of each contributor, if known, the amount contributed, and the date the contribution was received; the names and addresses of persons who contributed an aggregate amount of twenty-five dollars or less need not be listed in the report and instead may be grouped as one item and so identified;

(2) The amount owed at the beginning of the reporting period and an itemized listing of all expenditures made by the committee, the name and address of the person to whom the amounts were paid or promised, the purpose for which the expenditure was made, and the date of the expenditure; and

(3) An itemized listing of any anonymous contributions which were transmitted to the state treasurer, the amount of each such contribution, and the date transmitted; and

(4) The report filed by the official committee, additionally, shall include a summary of all reports made to it by other political committees, indicating the amounts contributed to and expended by each.

3. If the candidate or official political committee supporting a successful candidate fails to file the statements required in this section, the appropriate officer shall not issue the certificate of election, and the candidate shall be prohibited from taking the office, without regard to the outcome of the election, and if the candidate takes office before thirty days after the election he shall file his final report before taking office notwithstanding the provisions of Section 9 of this act.

Section 8. 1. The provisions of this act regarding the reporting of campaign contributions and expenditures shall not apply to any candidate or to any political committee acting for, on behalf of, or in favor of any candidate if the candidate or political committee does not in the aggregate receive or expend more than five hundred dollars for any election and files the exemption affidavit required by this subsection. However, this exemption from reporting does not excuse a candidate or committee from complying with all other requirements of this act. If a candidate or political committee desires to be exempt from the reporting provisions of this act, the candidate or the treasurer of the committee shall, not later than thirty days prior to the date of the election, file a notice with the appropriate officer, of its intention to be exempt from the reporting provisions and it shall be exempt. No political committee may file such exemption affidavit without prior written approval of the candidate or candidates it supports. Only one political committee supporting a candidate may elect to be exempted from the reporting provisions of this section, unless the candidate has elected to be exempt from the reporting provisions, in which case no political committee supporting such a candidate may elect the exemption. The appropriate officer shall not accept more than one exemption affidavit per candidate, from either the candidate or from any committee supporting his candidacy.

2. Any candidate or committee filing such affidavit shall not expend more than five hundred dollars for such election, and all contributions received by the candidate or political committee which would make the total amount of contributions received by the candidate or political committee exceed five hundred dollars shall immediately be treated as if they were excess anonymous contributions and be returned to the contributor or transmitted to the state treasurer.

3. If, after filing the exemption affidavit provided for by this section, the candidate or political committee subsequently determines it does not desire to be exempt from the reporting requirements of this act, or that it desires to receive contributions or make expenditures of more than five hundred dollars for any one election, it may file a notice with the appropriate officer of its rejection of such exemption; however, such rejection shall not be filed later than the seventh day prior to the election. The rejection of the exemption shall be accompanied by a full and complete report of all contributions and expenditures, as the candidate or committee would have been required to make under the provisions of Section 9 of this act on the thirtieth day prior to the election, and all other reporting requirements shall be complied with.

Section 9. 1. Reports required by Section 7 of this act shall be filed:

(1) not later than forty days before the date of an election covered by this act for the period ending on the forty-fifth day before the election, and

(2) not later than seven days before the date of an election covered by this act for the period ending on the twelfth day before the election, and

(3) not later than thirty days after an election covered by this act for the period ending on the date of the preparation of the report which date shall be no later than the twenty-fifth day after the election.

2. For a candidate, the period covered in the report required to be filed no later than forty days before an election shall begin on the day on which he became a candidate, as that term is defined in Section 2 of this act. The reports required to be filed not later than seven days before an election and not later than thirty days after election and any supplemental reports required in subsection 7 of this section shall be cumulative reports, and the period covered by each report shall begin on the closing date of the candidate's last report, if the candidate has filed previously, or if the candidate has not filed previously, the date on which he became a candidate as defined in this act.

3. For a political committee organized for the sole purpose of influencing the result of an election covered by this act, the period covered in the report required to be filed not later than forty days before an election shall begin on the date of the committee's organization. The reports required to be filed not later than seven days prior to an election and not later than thirty days after an election and any supplemental reports required by subsection 7 of this section shall be cumulative reports, and the period covered by each report shall begin on the closing date of the committee's last report if the committee has filed previously, or if the committee has not filed previously, the date of the committee's organization.

4. For any committee or subcommittee of a political party, as that term is defined in Chapter 120 RSMo, each report required to be filed by this section shall be a cumulative report and shall be for the period beginning with the closing date of the last report required to be filed under the provisions of this act. If the political party committee or subcommittee was established after January 1 of the year in which the report is being filed, the beginning date of the period covered in the committee's first report filed under this act shall be the date on which the committee or subcommittee was organized or established.

5. For all other political committees, not covered by subsections 3 and 4 of this section, each report required to be filed by this section shall be a cumulative report and shall be for the period beginning with the closing date of the last report required to be filed under the provisions of this act. If no previous report has been filed, the report shall be for the period beginning on the date the committee was organized but no earlier than two years prior to the election pertinent to the report being filed.

6. Beginning with the effective date of this act, each committee or subcommittee of any political party, as that term is defined in Chapter 120 RSMo, shall file an annual statement of all receipts and expenditures with the appropriate officer on the thirty-first day of January of each year for the period of January 1 through December 31 of the preceding year. The annual report required by this subsection shall be in addition to the reports required by subsection 1 of this section and shall include all the information required in subsection 2 of Section 7 of this act.

7. If the statement required to be filed not later than thirty days after an election by a candidate or by a committee described in subsection 3 or subsection 5 of this section shows a deficit or surplus in excess of one hundred dollars, or if additional contributions or expenditures in excess of one hundred dollars are received or made, a supplemental report shall be filed with the appropriate officer between the eighty-fifth and the ninetieth days following the election and every ninety days thereafter until the accounts show no deficit or surplus in excess of one hundred dollars, or until four years have passed since the election. The supplemental report shall not be required, however, for candidates for a general election who have won a primary election and are required to file reports for such general election, nor for committees supporting such candidates unless the committee has been disbanded or does not participate in the general election campaign.

8. Any report which is mailed to the appropriate officer, properly addressed and with proper postage, at least one day prior to the dates set forth in this act for the filing of reports, shall be deemed to have been mailed properly and to have been received by the appropriate officer in the ordinary course of business if mailed from within the state of Missouri, whether or not the report is actually received by the appropriate officer on the given date set forth in this act.

Section 10. 1. The Secretary of State shall assist the Commission and promptly supply the commission with copies of all materials pertaining to this act and further shall:

(1) Develop, with the approval of the Commission, forms for reports, statements and other information required to be filed by this act, and shall furnish such forms to persons required to file reports and statements under this act together with a summary of the major provisions of Chapter 129 RSMo;

(2) Prepare, with the approval of the Commission, publish, and furnish to the persons required to file such reports and statements a manual setting forth recommended uniform methods of bookkeeping and reporting;

(3) Develop a filing, coding, and cross-indexing system consonant with the purposes of this act;

(4) Make the reports and statements filed with him available for public inspection and copying, commencing as soon as practicable but not later than the end of the second day after which it was received, and permit copying of any such report or statement by hand or by duplicating machine, as requested by any person, at the expense of such person, but no information copied from such reports and statements shall be sold or utilized by any person for the purpose of soliciting contributions or for any commercial purpose;

(5) Preserve such reports and statements for a period of not less than ten years from the date of receipt;

(6) Compile and maintain a current list of all statements or parts of statements pertaining to each candidate;

(7) From reports filed with him prepare and publish an annual report including compilations of amounts contributed and expended for the influencing of nominations and elections according to such categories as determined by the Commission;

(8) From reports filed with him, prepare and publish such other reports as he may deem appropriate;

(9) Disseminate statistics, summaries, and reports prepared under this act;

(10) Examine each report and statement filed with his office under the requirements of this act

Chiefs lose first home game to Broncos in NFL history

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Denver Broncos broke a long-standing jinx thanks to little cornerback Calvin Jones, rookied Jon Keyworth of Colorado and reserve quarterback Steve Ramsey.

Never had the Broncos been able to beat the Chiefs in Kansas City but Sunday they finally turned the trick, winning their first National Football Football League game of the season 17-14.

Jones, a mere 5-foot-7, 169-pounder, faded in front of a pass thrown by Mike Livingston from the Chiefs' end zone and returned it nine yards to the Kansas City 11, setting up the winning touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Three plays later, Keyworth punched into the line from three yards out to put the Broncos out front. It was his second six-point stab of the game.

"Sure," said Jones, "my size is a disadvantage but it's like a blind person ... you have to adjust. Sometimes I wish I was 6-5. I don't know how bad the pass was thrown but it was right at me. We'd been working on that play all season."

Keyworth said to "give the credit to the other players. All I did was run a couple of yards a couple of times."

Ramsey came off the bench at the start of the second half and fired up the inept Denver offense that had produced only a 41-yard field goal by Jim Turner.

"Ramsey did a great job. ..." said Coach John Ralston of Denver, 1-2-1. "Charley Johnson, our starting quarterback, asked to be taken out of the game at halftime. That's the mark of a super athlete as he injured his thumb on his throwing hand in the pregame warmups but thought he could go anyway."

The Chiefs, 2-2, knocked out of a tie with Oakland for first place in the American Conference West Division, had grabbed a 14-3 lead in the first half on Willie Ellison's one-yard run and Bobby Bell's 28-yard return for a touchdown of an intercepted pass thrown by Johnson.

The Chiefs' defense was superb most of three quarters, twice denying Denver touchdowns after the Broncos had reached one one-and two-yard lines.

"I really don't believe in jinxes," Ralston said, "but I will have to admit it is good to beat those guys on the road. We had an old fashioned gut check at the half and came back to win ... after some of the dumb plays I called in the first half."

Chiefs Coach Hank Stram, stunned over the reversal of things, said, "It's unbelievable. I've never been associated with a game that has been a more bitter loss than this one. It's criminal to play that well defensively and not do anything on offense ... the only problem we had was us."

Surprising Cardinals win fourth straight

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers' experiment with Joe Reed as a replacement for injured Steve Spurrier at quarterback appears to have ended with the 34-9 drubbing the 49ers took from the unbeaten St. Louis Cardinals.

In next Monday night's National Football League game in Detroit against the Lions, Dennis Morrison, a 6-foot-3, 211-pound rookie from Kansas State "will start if he's able to go," Coach Dick Nolan said after his club's loss to the Cards Sunday.

Morrison was used at quarterback for a dozen plays late in the game before he had to leave with bruised ribs. "That's great," he said when newsmen told him of Nolan's decision. "I guarantee I'll be able to play."

"If Morrison can't go, then we have no other choice than (Tom) Owen," said Nolan. Owen, a rookie from Wichita, was used for the last seven plays against the Cards, completing one nine-yard pass and having one interception in five throws.

Morrison completed the first four passes he threw, including a 16-yarder to Danny Abramowicz, who now has caught at least one pass in 95 consecutive games and needs one more to tie an NFL record held by Lance Alworth. But Morrison's next four passes missed target, with one intercepted.

The strong St. Louis defense gave Reed a miserable afternoon.

In the third quarter the Cards exploded for 24 points on three touchdown passes by Jim Hart and a 47-yard field goal by Jim Bakken. Mel Gray sped 57 and 59 yards for touchdowns on two of the Hart passes, and Donny Anderson caught a four-yarder for the other score.

In four series of downs in the third quarter, Reed completed one five-yard pass. He was trapped for short losses three times trying to pass, twice on third down; narrowly escaped an interception on another third down and had a fumble that teammate Tom Mitchell recovered on the San Francisco two.

Reed finished with two completions in seven passes for 63 yards. Fifty-eight yards came on a touchdown pass which Gene Washington carried 30 yards down the right sideline at 5:45 of the first quarter but Reed bobbled the hold for the point.

The 49ers boosted their lead to 9-0 on a 20-yard field goal by Bruce Gossett early in the second quarter, but after that Reed was able to get the 49ers across midfield only once in six offensive series, and then only to the Card 41.

"At the half we realized they weren't in very good shape," said Hart. "They were tired, dragging. We knew if we sustained a drive we could tire them out. We were in better shape."

Coach Don Coryell, whose surprising Cardinals-off to their best NFL start since 1966-are one of three unbeaten NFL teams, said, "This was our best game, certainly in the second half."

Terry Metcalif, who ran 24 yards for the first St. Louis touchdown two minutes before the half, believes the Cards can keep their momentum. "The big difference in the team this year is everybody is pulling together-helping each other. We'll be ready for Dallas," he said.

Metcalf was the game's top rusher with 95 yards in 14 carries for a 6.8 average, and 49er rookie Wilbur Jackson was a close second with 91 in 14 tires.

Fullback Ken Willard was sidelined early with an ankle injury, but will be ready for Dallas, the Cards' trainer said.

Geiberger wins Sahara Invitational by 3 shots

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Al Geiberger kept munching on peanut butter crackers and talking to himself.

"If I don't keep talking to myself, all the time, I tend to back off. I kept telling myself that second place doesn't do me any good at this stage of my career," the 37-year-old veteran said Sunday after his three-stroke victory in the Sahara Invitational Golf Tournament.

He talked himself into it, shooting a final round 69 — two under par on the sun-splashed, 6,800-yard Sahara-Nevada Country Club course —for a 273 total.

"When you go so long without winning, you begin to think you can't," said Geiberger, whose last previous triumph came in the 1966 PGA National Championship.

He paused for a moment, smiled broadly and said: "Johnny Miller wins eight in one year, I win one in eight years."

He got a little help in winning this one.

"All of a sudden everybody laid down," he said. "Usually they're going the other way — they're coming at you. But this time they backed off. It's a good feeling."

He clinched it when challenging Chi Chi Rodriguez, within one stroke of the top, hit his tee shot into the water on the 18th hole, dropped it into a depression, put his next in the woods, took a couple of shots to get out, finally got in a trap and made a 15-foot putt for a triple bogey eight.

It was Geiberger's last challenge.

Jerry Heard, rookie Wally Armstrong and brothers Dave and Mike Hill tied for second at 276. Armstrong and Mike Hill had 68s, Dave Hill a 72 and Heard a 71.

Miller, the young man who has dominated the tour this season, made a last-gasp bid for his ninth triumph with a blazing 65. But he was just too far back, finished at 277, cleaned out his locker and headed home for Napa, Calif., possibly done for the year. He has only one more tournament on his schedule and may skip that one.

Cey hey

L.A. jumps into driver's seat

PITTSBURGH (AP) — There's nothing like two victories on the road before going home to make a team feel like the National League champions.

"I'm not saying we're going to sweep, but we're the National League champs," said Jim Wynn, the power behind the Dodgers' season-long drive that has left them one victory short of the NL title and a World Series berth after Sunday's 5-2 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"We're in the driver's seat," said Ron Cey, who rapped a homer, two doubles and a single to tie the playoff record of four hits in one game set by Pittsburgh's Bob Robertson in 1971.

"Now the Pirates got to pull all the stops," echoed Willie Crawford, whose pinch-hit single brought Cey home with the winning run against Pittsburgh's relief ace Dave Giusti.

No team has overcome a 2-0 deficit since the best-of-five intra-league playoffs began in 1969 and the Pirates task is made more difficult by the series shifting to Los Angeles.

"I'd say we have our backs to the wall," Pittsburgh Manager Danny Murtaugh said after the Dodgers scored three runs off Giusti to snap a 2-2 tie.

"But we've been counted out of it nine or 10 times this year, and here we are playing in the big series," added Murtaugh, whose club was 14 games under .500 early in the season.

The Dodgers, who won 3-0 Saturday behind the pitching of Don Sutton, led 2-0 into the Pirates' seventh Sunday, and Pittsburgh's 15 scoreless innings matched the playoff record they set in two games against Cincinnati in 1970.

The Pirate famine ended in the seventh inning when singles by Paul Popovich, Richie Zisk and Al Oliver helped Pittsburgh pull to a 2-2 tie against Dodger starter Andy Messersmith.

However, Murtaugh had to sacrifice starting pitcher Jim Rooker for a pinch-hitter in that inning, and the Dodgers broke the game open in the eighth against Giusti.

Cey, who made two errors in the Dodgers' first-game victory, opened the inning with a double into the left field corner. He then beat catcher Manny Sanguillen's throw to third on a ball tapped weakly in front of the plate by Bill Russell and scored on Crawford's bloop single to left.

A single to right by free-swinging Manny Mota then chased Giusti and scored Russell, before Dave Lopes stroked another single off rookie Larry Demery to score Crawford with the final run.

Ramon Hernandez, the third Pirate reliever, got Steve Garvey to hit into a bases-loaded double play to end the inning, but Dodger relief ace Mike Marshall shut out the Pirates over the final two innings.

The Pirates will pin their hopes on Bruce Kison, 9-8, when the series resumes Tuesday, while the Dodgers will counter with Doug Rau, 13-11.

Playoffs move to Baltimore

Oakland A's pull even on Holtzman's 5-hitter

OAKLAND (AP) — It was a familiar script: Oakland trailing Baltimore in the American League playoffs until Sal Bando started swinging at Dave McNally's pitches.

There were a few new wrinkles thrown in, such as two errors by the usually sure-handed Baltimore Orioles. They enabled Bando and Ray Fosse to drive in four unearned runs with home runs as the A's rebounded from Saturday's 6-3 defeat to whip the Orioles 5-0 Sunday behind Ken Holtzman's five-hit pitching.

The A's, two-time defending World Series champions, victimized McNally for the second straight year to square the best-of-five-game series at 1-1. A year ago in Baltimore, Bando homered twice against McNally, and had a third homer taken away by a leaping catch.

Bando led off the fourth inning by watching two pitches miss the strike zone. Then, he said, "I tried to hold up on my swing and popped it up. I was just depressed."

But Bobby Grich, Baltimore's Golden Glove-caliber second baseman, dropped the high pop in foul territory.

"I had it right in my glove," Grich said. "It wasn't like the ball was right in the sun — just a little bit."

The repreived Bando lined a three-ball, one-strike fast ball over the left-field fence, just eluding the glove of Baltimore's Don Baylor.

"I thought he caught it," Bando said of a play that would have been a re-run of Al Bumbry's leaping grab in Game Two of the 1973 playoffs in which Holtzman outpitched McNally, 6-3.

Fosse, sidelined much of the season from surgery on a disc in his back, credited teammate Jesus Alou's "magic wand" after belting a double in the seventh inning and the three-run homer in the eighth off of Grant Jackson. An error by substitute shortstop Frank Baker kept the inning going for Fosse.

"It's heavier, 35 ounces, and has more wood," said Fosse, who wasn't sure he'd be a starter behind the plate until Friday night. "I dreamed I'd hit a three-run homer. It came two days later," he said.

The playoffs move to Baltimore Tuesday for the third and fourth games, plus a fifth if necessary on Thursday.

"It doesn't bother me at all," Dark said of the task of winning twice at Baltimore. "With these two teams, it doesn't matter where we play."

"It looks like it'll go the distance," Orioles third baseman Brooks Robinson said. "I'm glad we're going back home."

Manager Earl Weaver of Baltimore said that Sunday "just wasn't our day. Our line drives were just within reach and those homers just made it."

"The name of the game in the playoffs is good pitching," said Dark, who sends left-hander Vida Blue, 17-15, against Baltimore's Jim Palmer, 7-12, Tuesday.

Blue is winless in four decisions as a post-season pitcher, and Palmer, last year's AL Cy Young Award winner, started 1974 with a sore arm.

Mighty Cey at Bat

Ron Cey tees off on this pitch from Jim Rooker in the sixth inning. The Dodgers' third baseman went four-for-four, including this double off Rooker, Pirates' left-hander. Cey's four hits included a homer, two doubles and a single in the Dodgers' 5-2 win over Pittsburgh, which lost the opening two games of the best-of-five series. (AP Wirephoto)

Checker flies for Reutemann

Emerson Fittipaldi wraps up second world driving crown

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — Carlos Reutemann won the battle and fellow Latin-American Emerson Fittipaldi won the war during Sunday's 15th running of the United States Grand Prix.

"It is good," both said, following Reutemann's wire-to-wire victory and Fittipaldi's fourth-place finish that gave him his second world driving championship in the last three years. Jackie Stewart won last year.

And both were somewhat subdued in their victory celebrations because of the death during the race of 25-year-old Austrian driver Helmuth Koinigg.

Koinigg, of Salzburg, Austria, was killed instantly when his Surtees-Ford failed to make a hairpin turn on the race course and crashed through a steel barrier.

His was the third death among Grand Prix drivers this year and the second at Watkins Glen in two years. American Peter Revson was killed in South Africa in March and Switzerland's Silvia Moser at Monza, Italy, in April. French ace Francois Cevert died in a crash at Watkins Glen the day before last year's race.

Reutemann, who had qualified his Brabham-Ford team car in the front-row pole position, never trailed as he took the lead at the starter's flag and gradually built up a safe lead over teammate Carlos Pace of Brazil.

Pace passed Britisher James Hunt with only five laps left to claim second place. Hunt was third in a Hesketh-Ford, followed by Fittipaldi in a McLaren team car, and John Watson of Ireland in a third Brabham.

Reutemann, who earlier had won the South African and Austrian Grand Prix races, ran the 199.284 miles in 1:40:21.0 for a speed of 119.12 miles per hour — a new record for the redesigned Glen circuit.

He was paid $50,000 from the $300,000 purse, his biggest paycheck ever. He said he will share it with members of his team.

Fittipaldi had entered the race deadlocked with Clay Regazzoni, a Ferrari driver from Switzerland, each with 52 championship points. Jody Scheckter, 24, of South Africa, trailed with 45 points.

But Regazzoni never was a contender and was out of the championship running after having to pit for a tire change 20 laps into the race.

Scheckter, who could have become the youngest world titleholder ever, ran up front during the early going but was forced out at the 45th lap when his Tyrrell-Ford developed fuel problems.

Fittipaldi thus wound up with 55 points for the season, while Regazzoni remained second with 52 points. Scheckter placed third in the final standings, with Regazzoni's Ferrari teammate Niki Lauda holding fourth with 38.

Southwest Mo. State rides two touchdowns by Lawson

By The Associated Press

Sophomore Greg Lawson scored two touchdowns to lead Southwest Missouri to a 41-26 victory over Missouri Southern Saturday while Central Methodist won its Heart of America Conference opener by pounding Ottawa 35-14.

Southwest built up a 27-6 half-time lead then held off the Lions, who got two TDs from Robert Davis. Southwest now is 3-1, Southern, an independent, is 1-2.

Steve Dinalfo scored twice for Central Methodist on runs of 31 and six yards. Rod Bower passed for two Ottawa touchdowns.

In other Heart of America play, Tarkio and Missouri Valley played to a 14-14 tie and Graceland topped Baker 28-16. William Jewell whipped a nonconference foe, Missouri Western, 35-13.

In nonconference play involving Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association teams, Southeast Missouri raced past Arkansas Tech 44-0 and Lincoln University stopped Kentucky State 20-15 while Central Missouri was edged by Northeastern Oklahoma 14-13 and Northeast Missouri bowed to State College of Arkansas 16-13.

In other action involving independents, Washington University of St. Louis rolled over Center of Kentucky 51-15 and Culver-Stockton turned back Iowa Wesleyan 20-12.

Joe Greco of Tarkio passed for one touchdown and ran for another to help the Owls tie Missouri Valley, which got touchdowns on a two-yard plunge by Gene Snyder and a four-yard run by Gregg Farris.

Southeast Missouri's Alphonso Council scored on runs of 13 and five yards and Bobby Everage added another while Mike Wood kicked field goals of 34, 22 and 46 yards in the Indians' win.

William Jewell evened its record at 2-2 by building up a 21-0 lead at the half to dominate Western. The Cardinals marched 76 yards the first time they got the ball, with Mike Thebeau's 18-yard touchdown pass to Mark Schuyler climaxing the drive.

Northeast Missouri's hopes of victory were drenched when Dennis Dickenson of State College of Arkansas intercepted a pass in the end zone to blunt a Bulldog drive in the final seconds of the game.

Washington University's Matt Schocklee ran for two touchdowns and Paul Adams had two touchdown pass receptions in the Bears' romp.

David Pearson outraces Petty

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Superspeedway veteran David Pearson put it all together Sunday and held off a Richard Petty charge to win the $161,877 National 500 stock car race.

For Pearson, who beat Petty to the checkered flag by 1.4 seconds, it was his second straight victory at Charlotte Motor Speedway. For Petty, it was a continuation of his jinx at Charlotte. He has failed to win in 27 races here while finishing second five times.

The turning point in the 500-mile race (334 laps) came on lap 281 when Pearson's Mercury took the lead after experiencing tire and handling trouble. He led early in the race and then surrendered the front-running spot to 10 other drivers. Eventually, Pearson led four times for a total of 90 laps.

Petty, in a Dodge, began his last-minute charge on lap 317 with about 26 miles left to go. He fell in about 15 lengths behind Pearson when the fifth wreck of the day brought out the ninth caution lap of the race. Petty had closed the gap to about three lengths when the race ended.

Darrell Waltrip, who turned in perhaps his best effort in his two-year Grand National career, finished third in a Chevrolet. Waltrip led eight times for a total of 39 laps.

Donnie Allison, who led seven times for 37 laps, was fourth in another Chevrolet while his brother, Bobby, finished fifth in a Matador, a lap behind the four leaders. Bobby Allison, who led 10 times for 80 laps, was a contender until lap 286 when the eighth caution flag came out because of a wreck.

Motorcyclist killed in Saturday race

ROLLA, Mo. (AP) — Charles Dickman, 26, of Rolla, was killed Saturday night when his cycle spun out of control during the first heat race at the Rolla Cycle Speedway.

Four other motorcycles were involved in the pilup, but there were no injuries.

The remainder of the program was canceled after the accident.

Jim: "Let's write about squeeze plays."

Oswald: "They're like death and taxes. We will always have them."

Jim: "They are happy things for the squeezer, but tend to make the squeezee most unhappy."

Oswald: "The simplest of these plays is the two-suit squeeze against one opponent. Sometimes you have to prepare this sort of squeeze. On other occasions it developes automatically if declarer just runs off high cards in the other suits."

Jim: "South takes a quick look at dummy and counts 12 top tricks. Four spades, four hearts, three diamonds and a club. One opponent must have a diamond stopper since suits never break 3 1/2 - 3 1/2. Both may hold club stoppers, but if the man who holds the long diamonds happens to hold all the high clubs he is going to be squeezed."

Oswald: "The process is a simple one. South wins the club lead and runs off the spades and hearts. West must make three discards. He also can only throw two clubs and must unguard the diamonds on the lead of the last major suit card."

Boils warn of diabetes

Dear Dr. Lamb — After 21 years of G forces in fighter aircraft I developed boils of the buttocks. A sugar tolerance test was normal enough to remain on flying status, although the flight surgeon suspected diabetes.

Ten years and numerous boils later, another sugar test resulted in hospitalization for regulation of diabetes. The problem was quickly controlled by a 1200 calorie diet. I lost 10 pounds and stay at that level. I'm six feet tall and weigh 165 pounds. My urine tests are usually negative. The last infection took over a year to heal. My last fasting blood sugar test during this problem was 120. The blood sugar levels and the boils are the only evidence of diabetes I have had.

I have also observed that positive urine tests can be avoided by taking a stiff shot of bourbon. A doctor friend told me it was because alcohol stimulates the pancreas to produce more insulin. If this is true, perhaps some diabetics using oral medication might prefer to control their condition in this manner. I'd appreciate your comments.

Dear Readers — Your letter is interesting from several points. First, frequent boils anywhere often suggest the underlying problem of diabetes. Anyone who has them should be evaluated for diabetes.

Second, an infection will make diabetes more severe or it will cause a person who appears to be normal (but is really a diabetic) to have an abnormal diabetes test. Any stress, which includes infections, infectious illnesses, accidents, physical injury or even emotional shock, can unmask an underlying problem of diabetes.

Third, your weight reduction reversed your abnormal findings and demonstrates a truth in the management of many diabetics. About half of all diabetics, at least in their earlier stages, can be managed quite well with simple weight reduction. Of course the advanced diabetic with weight loss is quite another problem. Many diabetics do not need oral pills. They need a diet, and they need to stay on it until it accomplishes the goal the doctor sets.

Fourth, you had no symptoms of diabetes (except the boils). At least half of all diabetics cannot be diagnosed without a blood test, preferably a tolerance test or at least a blood test after eating (as opposed to a fasting test alone of one blood sample).

Now about that alcohol. It is true that alcohol will lower blood sugar. BUT it does so in a harmful way. A normal person who drinks too much will have a low blood sugar (hypoglycemia) the next morning. It is part of the picture of a severe hangover. Alcohol interferes with the normal enzyme mechanism in the liver that you need to convert proteins into glucose. It is also a way to increase the fatty deposits in the liver caused by using fat alone for energy.

Diabetics often develop fatty liver anyway, if not properly treated. The consumption of alcohol only makes this worse and causes it to occur earlier. I cannot condetn too strongly the indiscriminate use of alcohol in diabetics. The low blood sugar effect of alcohol is sometimes called "smoke poisoning," which is a slang term but which is descriptive. (NEA)

Insurance firms said involved

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The president of the Lincoln, Nen., chapter of the National Organization for Women said Sunday that major American insurance companies are behind many "stop the Equal Rights Amendment drives."

Ms. De Loris Clouse made the charge at a session of the Midwest regional conference of NOW, attended by some 300 persons here. She said an 18-month investigation has identified opposing forces to the ERA as having connections with insurance companies.

The amendment, if adopted, would prohibit sexual discrimination as a national standard. The amendment has received the approval of 35 state legislatures and needs three more for ratification.

She said the investigation and report had been presented to the organization so women "can know their enemies in their fight for the ERA."

Ms. Clouse said the investigation was launched by the Nebraska women after the Nebraska Legislature rescinded in 1973 the amendment that was approved in 1972.

She said after the amendment was rescinded, ERA members began checking and found that mail received by 10 legislators sounded like they came from the same basic source.

She said further checking found that the Nebraska state senator leading the fight to halt the ERA "was an attorney for a very large insurance company" and additional investigation revealed a pattern whereby outspoken individuals against ERA usually turned up on the payrolls of insurance companies.

AMA withdrawal motion rejected

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Delegates to the annual convention of the Physicians National Housestaff Association Sunday rejected, 47-2, a motion to pull out of the American Medical Association.

The motion charged the AMA was unresponsive and stubborn to demands for better working conditions and improved patient care standards in American hospitals.

The Housestaff Association is made up mostly of young physicians, interns and residents.

'Peculiarity' of church is stressed at conference

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Pronouncing a prohet's blessing on a congregation of 7,000, church President Spencer W. Kimball Sunday closed the 144th Semi-annual General Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon).

President Kimball, considered a prophet, seer and revelator by 3.3 million Latter-day Saints, spoke to church members gathered in the 107-year-old Mormon Tabernacle in the shadow of the six-spired Mormon Temple.

The 79-year-old church president told them to take home the conference message of family unity, personal sexual morality and marital stability.

"The home and its strength are our peculiarity," he said, urging the creation in each family of a "strong, steady current flowing toward our goal of righteous life."

In that way, he said, "we and our children may be carried forward in spite of the contrary winds of hardship, disappointment, temptation and fashion."

The "peculiarity" of the church was a theme echoed by other leaders.

"As we finally clothe ourselves with the whole armor of God, we will not be ashamed of the Gospel of Jesus Christ but will be proud to be counted among the valiant even though we may be looked upon as being a peculiar people," said Bishop Victor L. Brown, presiding bishop of the church.

Elder Gordon B. Hinckley of the church's Council of Twelve Apostles said, "Unless the world alters the course of its present trends — and that is not likely — and if, on the other hand, we continue to follow the techings of the prophets, we shall increasingly become a peculiar and distinctive people of whom the world will take note."

But he said although church members must maintain their standards, he did not advocate a "retreat from society."

"On the contrary, we have a responsibility and a challenge to take our places in the worlds of business, science, government, medicine, education, communications and every other worthwhile and constructive vocational endeavor," Elder Hinckley said.

British are bored by elections on Thursday

LONDON (AP) — Joe Coral, the bookie, is using newspaper ads to drum up betting action on Thursday's general elections. That's how bored the British are over the elections deemed by the three major parties as Britain's most important since the dark days of World War II.

The columnists, editorial writers and commentators on the telly are calling it the dullest election since the yawn of the modern parliamentary system, and a Gallup poll just out reports the lowest voter interest in a quarter of a century.

The issues are compelling enough: rising prices, militant trade unions, the Common Market, high mortgage rates, unemployment, nationalization of industries. The fault seems to lie with the timing — only seven months since the last elections — and with the candidates, who have met too often in the past decade on the field of ennui.

TV interviewer David Frost, who used to commute across the Atlantic in search of meaningful chit-chat, recently was host to the three major candidates on successive talk shows.

Labor Prime Minister Harold Wilson; his predecessor at No. 10 Downing St., Conservative Edward Heath, and Liberal Jeremy Thorpe were gossipy, lively and urbane, each according to his public mold.

In sum it made exciting, informative political talk. Did it interest the electorate? Frost garnered better audience ratings and more headlines a week earlier when Martha Mitchell held forth on Watergate and politics in America.

But the tedium at the top of the political tree has not precluded more lively laborers elsewhere in the parliamentary vineyard.

During the weekend Una Kroll, family doctor, drop-out Anglican nun and mother of four, led a march through the London suburbs of Sutton and Cheam as the only women's rights candidate in the field.

A few miles away in the London suburb of Lambeth Norwood, Gay Liberation Front candidate Malcolm Greatbanks, a university lecturer in English, was campaigning as "the only openly homosexual candidate in the country."

Greatbanks launched his campaign from squatter quarters in an abandoned store by holding hands with the milkman.

Recover stolen beef in Chicago

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Authorities have recovered 38,000 pounds of beef stolen in Chicago.

Jackson County Sheriff Kenneth Carnes said the beef, valued at about $30,000, was recovered near suburban Blue Springs, Mo., Sunday. He said federal charges would be filed later against several persons.

Sedalia School District No. 200
Sedalia, Missouri 65301

We have examined the accompanying summary statement of receipts, transfers, disbursements and balances by funds of the Sedalia School District No. 200, Sedalia, Missouri for the year ended June 30, 1974. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, and accordingly included such tests of the accounting records and such other auditing procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances. We also examined the method of maintaining pupil attendance and transportation records, the degree of compliance of the budgetary and disbursement procedures with the requirements of the budgetary statute (Chapter 67, RS Mo.) and the schedules of receipts and disbursements (or expenditures) of projects under the following Federal programs:

1. Elementary and Secondary Education Acts of 1965, Titles I and II.
2. National Defense Education Act, Titles III.

In our opinion, the statement referred to above presents fairly the results of cash transactions of the Sedalia School District No. 200 for the year ended June 30, 1974, on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year and is in conformity with the provisions of the statutes of the State of Missouri. It is also our opinion that:

1. The pupil attendance and transportation records are so maintained as to disclose with substantial accuracy the average daily attendance and average daily transportation of pupils of application for state aid and transportation data schedules which for the year ended June 30, 1974 were 4,586.93 and 2,172.93 respectively.
2. The budgetary and disbursement procedures were in compliance with the requirements of the budgetary statute (Chapter 67 RS Mo.)
3. The schedules of receipts and disbursements (or expenditures) of projects under the Federal programs mentioned above present fairly these transactions in conformity with the requirements of the specific programs.

Other exhibits and schedules reporting additional information has been subjected to the tests and other auditing procedures applied in the examination of the summary statement of receipts, transfers, disbursements and balances by funds and, in our opinion, is fairly stated in all respects material in relation to that statement taken as a whole.

The Dodge Boys PROUDLY ANNOUNCE THE VAN WE PLAN TO KEEP IN 1st PLACE!

'75 DODGE TRADESMAN VAN.

HARD-WORKING PARTNER ON THE JOB.

Dodge Tradesman is a hard-working business partner that's available on two separate wheelbases (109" and 127") in three great models, including Maxivan, the largest compact van built in the United States.

FUN-LOVING CUSTOMIZED VAN.

Tradesman vans are easily adapted as camper and leisure conversions with options such as power steering, AM-FM radio, air conditioning, rear compartment heater, and more. (The custom paint job and special touches can be yours alone.)

ENGINEERING INNOVATIONS SUCH AS:

Solid-state Electronic Ignition. Electronic Ignition delivers up to 35 percent more starting power than conventional ignition systems. With our solid-state Electronic Ignition, there are no points or condenser to get wet or wear out.

CLUB CAB PICKUP.

Meet America's first Club Cab...Dodge Club Cab. It's nice to be imitated, like the innovative Club Cab, but it's more important to be able to offer buyers "more truck per buck." Now, you might not have known that on all comparable models our Club Cab carries a bigger payload than the Ford Supercab (up to 1200 pounds more). Come in, and check out the Club Cab for yourself. And while you're there, check into the four-wheel-drive Club Cab or our Club Cab with Dyna-Trac dual rear wheels. Dodge Club Cab, truly the first in Club Cab pickups.

(Tell 'em Casey sent ya!) See my Dodge ACTION TEAM!

SONY® Ask Anyone!!

GET A SONY

If you're looking for a big sound that comes in small packages, come listen to the SONY HP 161 integrated Component Music System and see how well it fits in . It's a music system that's smaller than it sounds.

Radio reception on the HP 161 is superb. The tuner has a SONY FET front end for picking up weak distant stations while preventing distortion to strong local signals. A light signals when a station is broadcasting in stereo. And the solid state, all silicon amplifier driving two SONY 2-way speakers delivers a big live like sound.

It's the same with the phono systems. A BSR three speed turntable with a SONY ceramic cartridge delivers the same big, rich sound just as superbly with records. Operation is automatic or manual with a cueing lever for manual positioning.

It's big sound housed in small, attractive wood grain enclosures. With connections for tape or stepping up to 4 channel sound. All the controls you need and a removable dust cover. All put together for you by SONY. Sometimes you do get more for less. Come in and listen to the HP 161.
